40 HURT IN P. R. R. WRECK

CRACK TRAINS HIT

LIMA, O., March 31.—(AP.)—Twenty persons were in hospitals here today, suffering from severe injuries, and 20 others were nursing cuts and bruises as the result of a crash of two crack flyers on the Pennsylvania Railroad four miles west of here last night.

The 40 injured passengers were riding on the Liberty and Broadway Limited trains, both of them eastbound and running about 30 minutes apart.

Shortly after 6 o'clock the Broadway Limited, which was behind schedule, pulled up alongside a signal tower to await orders. A general sleet storm over northern Ohio had struck Lima, playing havoc with telephone and leveling telegraph wires until means of communication had been lost.

Running 30 minutes behind the Broadway Limited the Liberty was speeding along at 40 miles an hour trying to make up time it had lost because of the storm. Apparently the train crew was unaware that the Broadway had been stopped for orders.

The Liberty crashed into the rear end of the first train, telescoping a club car, a mail car and a parlor car and derailing some of its own coaches.

Twenty of the more seriously injured were removed to hospitals here, while the physicians gave medical attention to the others in the coaches. Henry Strasser, of Fort Wayne, engineer on the Liberty, was probably the most severely injured. He may lose an arm.

The track was cleared quickly and the two trains were consolidated for the remainder of the run from Chicago to Washington and New York. The Broadway left Chicago at 12:40 p. m. yesterday.

PITTSBURGHERS HURT

Battered and bruised a hundred or more passengers of the wreck of the Broadway and Liberty limiteds, two crack flyers of the Pennsylvania Railroad, arrived in Pittsburgh early this morning from Lima, O., where more than two score fellow passengers were injured last night in a rear-end collision of the two trains.

Among the Pittsburghers on the train, both of whom were injured slightly, are:

An American Record.
The Biggest News.
Lady Astor Has Fun.
Honor to the Mikado.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

GEORGE HALDEMAN and Eddie Stinson, Americans, yesterday broke the world's record in the air, flying without stopping fifty-three and one-half hours.

The French government offers a million francs to any French flier that will win back some flying records formerly held by French fliers.

A LITTLE encouragement from our government would make it impossible for any nation to compete with American flying.

The first flying machine was made here. We have the money and engineers. This ought to be the flying nation.

THIS comes from Italy: "Major De Bernardi has established a new world's air record, 318¾ miles an hour."

Will solemn naval gentlemen that call flying machines "only an auxiliary" be good enough to tell what chance slow-moving ships on the surface would have against a flock of airplanes with that speed?

THE biggest news of the day is Mussolini's open attack on the Pope and the Catholic Church. He issues an order that "all organizations of Italian youth must be under Fascist direction." In thirty days all religious or other non-Fascist organizations for enrolling the young must disband.

LONDON says "the Italian King will assert himself in defense of the Italian constitution or abdicate." Mussolini would take his job.

GREAT BRITAIN probably will allow women to vote at twenty-one, as men do. Our intelligent contribution to the House of Commons, Lady Astor, of Virginia, amused herself while the "votes for flappers" was discussed.

SHE pointed out that the "flappiest flapper" has an intellect above the average "cake eater," and referred to the opposition as "albatrosses tied around our neck." Lady Astor should come back and work in our home Congress for a little while.

The new law will add 5,000,000 enfranchisements to 5,000,000 more women. Then 14,250,000 women will vote against 19,250,000 men. Which ought to help Britain.

IN THE great mountain called Nashan, in Manchuria, far up where air is pure and clear, Japan, a monument to the new Emperor, will build the greatest astronomical observatory in Asia.

That observatory, with a sixty-inch reflector and thirty-inch refracting telescope, will be a much nobler monument than any rearing horse of bronze.

HARVARD will make educational moving pictures, appropriating funds for a university film foundation, letting schools and colleges use the films. Harvard hopes to make the enterprise self-supporting. Well done, it could make money enough to run Harvard College easily. A good picture is worth ten thousand words, and remains in the mind when the words are forgotten.

ANOTHER 4,000,000-share day on the stock exchange, in fact a four million and a half share day. American Radio almost caught up with General Motors. It really is foolish to sell this country short, especially in a bull campaign.

A "100 TO 1 SHOT," Tipperary Tim, won the Grand National steeplechase yesterday. An American horse led the race nearly all the way, four miles and 856 yards, the hardest course in the world. The American horse, Billy Barton, belonging to Mr. Bruce of Baltimore, fell at the last fence. His Irish jockey, Cullinan, remounted. Forty-one horses started, a record for the great race. Only two were able to finish.

ONE line in the paper, "our fliers kill a dozen rebels." The rebels are Nicaraguans, fighting the established Nicaraguan government. What concerns us is that they seek to destroy a treaty that would enable us to serve the whole world, and Nicaragua especially, by building a sea-level canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

What chance have those poor ragged creatures in their mountains against a flying enemy?

COLONEL LINDBERGH and Major Lanphier plan a flight around the world in a Ryan plane to start this year. Japan is eager to welcome Lindbergh. The latter replies, "nothing to say."

GANGS of Chicago, having used bombs, machine guns, dynamite, add a little touch by using the torch. A man is shot down, then burned, with gasoline poured over his body. Senator Deneen is notified that he is "marked for a bomb." Very active gangsters.

ANOTHER SNAPS DEATH ROPE

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., March 31.—A few hours before he was to have sprung the trap for an execution on the gallows at the West Virginia State Prison last night, L. A. Harler, 48, chief prison guard, dropped dead.

Harler was to have acted as executioner in the death of Andrew Brady, 28, Negro, convicted of an attack on a white girl in Hardy county. Dr. D. B. Early, county coroner, stated that Harler probably died from heart trouble, brought on by the excitement of the scheduled hanging.

Harler is survived by his widow and seven children. He had been chief guard at the prison for seven years. Captain of the Guards C. H. Yates performed his duties in the hanging of the Negro.

MINE PACT BINDING, SAY PROBERS; RIP CHEATS

By MAX HENRICI,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Two more members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee declared yesterday that notwithstanding the denials of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Charles M. Schwab, that their coal companies had broken wage contracts with the United Mine Workers, they were convinced that the agreement they—as well as the Pittsburgh Coal Company—made with their workers were legally and morally binding, and that the companies had violated them.

The senators who made the statement today were Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, of New York, formerly a justice of the Supreme Court of that state, and Frank R. Gooding, Republican, of Iowa. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, a lawyer, previously had declared himself.

WILLIS' TRAGIC DEATH STUNS OHIO

International News Service

DELAWARE, O., March 31.—The entire state of Ohio was in mourning for its favorite son, Senator Frank B. Willis, who died suddenly here at 9:09 o'clock last night in the midst of a homecoming welcome prepared by thousands of his fellow citizens.

Stricken by a cerebral hemorrhage, Senator Willis collapsed and died a few moments before his campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination was to have been launched in his native city.

National Guardsmen of Delaware, called by their commandant, stood guard over the body in a little funeral parlor here this morning, while the Senator's grieving relatives made arrangements for the funeral.

Stunned residents of this city were still dazed today by the suddeness with which the end came. Gray's Chapel, where the Senator was to have delivered a speech, was crowded with his admiring fellow-citizens. A band, marching at the head of a red light parade in which the Senator rode, had played ragtime airs. A quartet from Columbus rendered vocal selections.

CALLS FOR WIFE, DIES

As the quartet began singing "Farewell," Senator Willis arose from the seat of honor and called C. A. Jones, his secretary. The Senator said:

"Jones, I've never felt this way before in my life. Something's awfully wrong."

Calling for his wife, the Senator

Order Coal Rates to East Cut

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP.)—Rates on bituminous coal suitable for household fuel from Pennsylvania-producing territory to principal New England points were ordered reduced 15 cents a ton today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

At the same time lower rates were prescribed to Eastern territory on bituminous coal from Southern mining districts.

The commission's order resulted from an attempt to fix rates on volatile types of bituminous coal which

GIRL, 15, 'LOOKOUT'

Fifteen-year-old Helen Burns, of 208 North Evaline street, admitted last night, police say, that she acted as "lookout" for two brothers while they robbed a gasoline station and two stores.

"Just for a thrill"—that was her explanation to Precinct Detectives Frank Scott and Michael O'Connor. She was turned over to Juvenile Court today.

Helen, police say, told of sitting in the back seat of a stolen car used by Joseph Magnone, 21, and his brother, Nick, 17, of 646 Chianti street, while they robbed a gasoline station at Rural street and North Negley avenue, and a fruit store and a confectionery shop on the North Side.

The brothers, arrested Tuesday, are being held in connection with numerous robberies and holdups.

38 DIE, 55 HURT IN QUAKE

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 31.—(AP.)—Thirty-eight persons were reported dead and 55 injured in a series of seven sharp earthquakes which shook Smyrna beginning at 2:30 a. m. today.

The city, famed since antiquity for its many disasters, saw houses rebuilt since the terrible fire of several years ago and the Turco-Greek War, crash down.

Half of the neighboring village of Tourbali was destroyed and in the village of Seidikeui 10 dead and 40 injured were reported.

The Turkish Red Crescent Society is rushing help to the stricken district.

All telegraph poles in the Smyrna region were hurled down and communications were cut off completely. News of the quake reached Constantinople by way of Koniau.

COX'S SON HELD IN CRASH

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Arrested after a chase in which a half dozen patrolmen fired a score of shots, James M. Cox, Jr., 24-year-old Yale student, who says he is the son of the former Governor of Ohio, candidate for the Presidency against the late President Harding in 1920, was arraigned today in Yorkville Court and held in $1,000 bail. He was charged with simple assault and leaving the scene of an accident. An additional charge of driving while intoxicated was made.

The chase that ended in young Cox's capture extended from Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, where his machine had knocked down and slightly injured a passing laborer, to the entrance of the Hotel Biltmore on Forty-fourth street, near Vanderbilt avenue, where Cox himself was slightly injured when he fell getting out of the car.

ORDER COAL RATES CUT

compete with anthracite. The Clearfield district of Pennsylvania was declared to be the typical source of low volatile coal in Northern territory, and the decision held that from this field to all points in New England states the present rate of $3.72 per ton, which applies to nearly all New England cities except seaports, should be cut 15 cents per ton. The decision held that the rates on coal from the Cumberland-Piedmont district in Maryland and West Virginia to Baltimore for ship transport should be cut from $2.59 per ton to $2.46 per ton.

It was held by the commission that in the interests of New England and Atlantic seaboard consumers, railroads should give joint rates to that territory from West Virginia, eastern Kentucky and Virginia mines.

STARTED BY STRIKE

Such a rate system from southern territory was first put into effect during the anthracite strike several years ago and allowed to expire after the emergency had passed.

To guide the roads, they were ordered to establish charges to all New Haven Railroad destinations which were established during the emergency. To all points on the Boston and Albany, Maine Central, Rutland, and Central Vermont Railroads, the joint rates prescribed were $2.10 above the rates to these destinations from the Clearfield district.

A number of other standards for the construction of the joint rates were also laid down and railroads were ordered to make them effective June 5, 1928.

The commission ruled there was no reason for altering existing rates on soft coal from mines in Pennsylvania, Maryland and northern West Virginia to New York or Philadelphia which shipments are intended for further transportation.

A special set of rates from the Coal River district in West Virginia to destinations in northern New York was also laid down. Under its terms the charge to Syracuse from Coal River may be $5.07 per ton; to Albany, $5.60 per ton; to Glens Falls, $5.87; to Utica, $5.20, and to Geneva, $4.93. Carriers will be expected to arrange rates to other destinations in the territory in preportion to the charges for the key cities.

Hoover Regrets Passing of Willis

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP.)—Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover last night said the death of United States Senator Frank B. Willis was a 'matter of deep regret to every citizen."

"Mr. Willis, as a school teacher, governor and senator has given his life to honest, upright service," the secretary said in a statement issued before he left for Washington. "The passing of so conscientious a public servant is a matter of deep regret to every citizen."

Bank Cash Gone; Nab Clerk

Charles W. Paskevitz, 30, formerly in the foreign exchange department of the First National Bank of Pittsburgh, was arrested today by United States Deputy Marshal David A. Goldman and charged with embezzling about $9,000 from the bank.

Paskevitz had been indicted by the Federal grand jury sitting in Erie on March 21.

The embezzlements took place, the charge avers, between March 6 and July 27, 1927. Paskevitz gave his address at Wilbert street, Mt. Washington.

WILLIS' DEATH STUNS

then staggered and fell dead in his secretary's arms just as the last strains of "Farewell" wafted through from the reception hall.

A physician, called from the audience, pronounced death due to cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Willis, prostrated by the tragedy, said she believed her husband had been made ill by the fumes of the torches in the parade to the chapel. She said that during the singing he had complained that he did not feel well.

The Senator's fellow-townsmen marched slowly out of the hall with bowed heads when his death was announced from the platform.

Senator Willis was ill Thursday night, Mrs. Willis said. He had been attended by three doctors yesterday after a restless night, but had said he felt no ill effects of his ailment.

He had been determined not to disappoint the comrades of his young manhood, who had gathered to hear him speak. They were his closest friends.

Senator Willis was born at Lewis Center, O., December 28, 1871, and had served his state and community in public affairs since he attained manhood.

He took his bachelor's degree at Ohio Northern University at Ada, O., and later earned his master's degree at his alma mater. Some years later he was graduated in law from Ohio Wesleyan University here.

After his law degree had been attained, he became a teacher of economics and law at Ohio Northern. In 1906 when he was admitted to the bar, he began a general practice.

ELECTED TO LEGISLATURE

But six years previous to his admittance he was elected to the State House of Representatives, where he served two terms.

In 1911 he was elected to the United States Congress, where he served two terms, retiring in 1915, when he was elected Governor of the state. After 1917, when his term as the state's chief executive expired, he retired from public life until 1921. In that year he was elected United States Senator, in which capacity he has served continuously since that time.

The Senator had always been a staunch Republican, and was a supporter of the late President Harding, whose name he placed in nomination at the convention. It was he who succeeded Harding as Senator.

The Senator had often been urged to make a campaign for the Republican nomination, even as far back as 1915, when he was noted as the fighting governor from Ohio. However, he always demurred, not feeling the time ripe for his entrance into such a race.

In this campaign, however, he consented. He was opposed in Ohio by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover.

Terrific battle was in progress when the Senator met his tragic end.

Mr. Willis was married in 1894 to Miss Allie Dustin of Galena, O. There was one child, Helen, now a teacher at Ohio Northern University.

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 31.—The United States survey steamer Kittanning, carrying government officials on the first Allegheny River cruise from Pittsburgh to Oil City in 31 years, was scheduled to reach here late this afternoon. Mayor M. A. Drake and a committee of citizens will welcome the party.

The craft was given an ovation last night at Emlenton and left there at 5 o'clock this morning. Donald T. Wright, publisher of the Waterways Journal, St. Louis, formerly of Franklin, is at the wheel. Maj. Jarvis J. Bain, United States district engineer stationed at Pittsburgh, is in charge of the party which is inspecting river channel and shore lines.

The boat will proceed from here to Oil City where a banquet and celebration will be held tonight.

WILLIS' DEATH LEAVES HOOVER FOES IN MAZE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The sudden and dramatic death of Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, was a severe shock today to political Washington.

He was one of the central figures in the movement to "Stop Hoover," and his death in the thick of the fight threw considerable confusion into the ranks of those intent upon keeping the Secretary of Commerce from getting the Republican presidential nomination at Kansas City next June.

Willis and Hoover alone were contesting for Ohio's 51 convention delegates and the fighting was just getting warm.

The first reaction of the politicians was that Willis' sudden removal from the scene left the Ohio field clear for Hoover. Examination of the Ohio primary law, however, revealed the inaccuracy of this conclusion, and, although the Senator's death has enormously complicated the work of "stopping Hoover," the opposition was still unwilling today to concede that they have lost their fight on the Buckeye battleground.

SECOND CHOICES

There are 51 Willis candidates in the field in Ohio, and under the law all have secondary choices. Thirty-one of these are said to be favorable to Dawes, with the rest split among Lowden, Curtis and a few scattered. If the anti-Hoover sentiment can be kept crystalized and disciplined, the opponents of the cabinet candidate may yet prevent him from getting a majority of the 51 delegates.

It remains to be seen, however, whether this anti-Hoover sentiment can be kept crystallized—scattered as it is among the rest of the field. The Hoover managers do not think it can be, and it may be that they are right.

Undoubtedly, it was pointed out here today, some of the Willis declared candidates were kept in line because of personal and political attachment to the senator, who ranked as near being the Republican "boss" of Ohio as anyone has since the death of Mark Hanna. Willis was the patronage dictator of the state, and through his judicious distribution of Federal offices had built himself a personal machine that was the envy of less fortunate politicians. Some of those who were his delegates were committed to him, it is said, solely because of their dependence upon him for further political favor in the state.

Now that Willis is gone, the question was being asked among the politicians today whether these delegates will stand firm. The evident fear of the anti-Hoover camp is a rush for the Hoover bandwagon. If that can be detected—and prevented—the Hoover opposition may be shaken, but it still is determined.

PRIMARY IN THREE WEEKS

Even with Willis alive and personally directing the fight, most politicians were ready to concede the Secretary of Commerce a part of the Ohio delegation. The Willis lieutenants themselves privately admitted that Hoover could not be kept from getting 10 or a dozen delegates from the populous cities like Cincinnati and Cleveland, where Willis was unpopular because of his radical prohibition views.

In all the tables which the Hoover managers have privately compiled to show that he will have in excess of 400 votes on the first ballot they have figured on about 15 Ohio delegates. In their more optimistic moments they have claimed a majority of the 51, but the practical politicians of Washington have doubted this.

If now, however, there is anything like a concerted movement to the Hoover standard on the part of those held to Willis because of personal or political attachment, it was pretty generally conceded today that Hoover is within sight of the nomination.

The Ohio preference primary is but a scant three weeks away. It is set for April 24, leaving but a short time in which to corral and discipline the weakened anti-Hoover forces in the state.

READY TO FLY

Carnegie Institute of Technology students may soon have opportunities to study aeronautics. Formey Congressman James M. Above, Miss Sylvia Goldenson and Martha Schreckengost, co-eds, are studying a seaplane model.

GIRL DESIGNERS

Out in Linden Hall, Linden and Forbes streets, the new course was the talk of the day. Shirley Miller, Carol Reese and Gladys Conner, seated on the table, made a minute study of Vincent J. Burnelli's "Pittsburgher" which, embodying radical ideas in design, would have a speed of 175 miles per hour and would carry 80 passengers. Burnelli, builder of the Lawson Air-Liner, the largest commercial plane ever constructed in America, has enthusiastically endorsed the School of Airplane Design, now being considered at Carnegie Tech. Mr. Burnelli, a recent visitor at the home of Congressman Magee, lives in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Imogene Remus, his second wife and the murdered woman. After Remus' argument to a Cincinnati jury, he was declared "not guilty on the sole grounds of insanity."

DAUGHTER

Romola Remus, his daughter, stayed by her father during his trial. Following the case, Remus was ordered committed to the state hospital at Lima, Ohio, from which he is now released.

JAILED

For awhile, awaiting trial, Remus was jailed. He was known for long as the "King of Bootleggers." Illegal technicality when he was confined to the asylum made possible the release.

OBSERVATION

This is a study of Remus. At the hospital, he has been kept under close observation and now is pronounced sane and "safe to be at large." Six alienists recently pronounced him sane.

OHIO DIGS OUT AFTER STORM

CLEVELAND, March 31.—(AP.)—An army of men in sleet-burdened Northwestern Ohio carried on today in an effort to connect nearly a score of cities with the outside world.

A maze of broken poles, tangled wires and shattered trees lay over an area between Sandusky, Toledo and Lima. More than 10,000 telephone and telegraph poles were believed to have snapped under the weight of ice-coated wires.

Throughout the district transportation today was either tied up or seriously impeded.

Property damage seemed certain to mount into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Findlay, Vanwert, Bowling Green, Fostoria and numerous smaller towns continued isolated.

ONE DEATH

As news of the isolated places became available, only one death was reported, that of Kenneth Phillips, 24, of Perrysburg, who died from exposure after he had been pinned beneath his automobile, wrecked on an icy pavement.

Findlay seemingly was among the worst sufferers from the storm. Factories, schools and business houses there were forced to suspend when power lines and other wires went down. The streets were a mass of broken poles and trees.

Norwalk schools also were closed. Property damage at Tiffin and adjoining territory was estimated at $300,000.

Lima, although at the southern edge of the storm area, reported damage of approximately $50,000, mostly to telephone and telegraph companies.

Interurban car service throughout the area was at a virtual standstill. Hundreds of automobiles were abandoned on roads throughout the storm area.

Orchardists declared their losses would be heavy as a result of broken trees.

TEACHER IS BEATEN TO DEATH

International News Service.

CONCORD, Mass., March 31.—Death by violence closed an automobile ride for pretty Miss Margaret Stewart, Beverly school teacher, whose body was found beside the Cambridge turnpike here. Identification was made at the morgue here today.

Accepting an automobile ride for Beverly while in Boston, in the opinion of state, county and town investigators, the little bobbed-hair school teacher was attacked, beaten and her body tossed from the car to the road.

Miss Stewart had made such a gallant fight that her assailant became infuriated and beat her with a murderous frenzy, according to investigators. At first believed to be the victim of a hit-and-run motorist, the girl was later found to have been the victim of an attack. Her little fists were still clenched, either in defense or in agony of pain.

FIRE RUINS BLOCK IN KANE

International News Service.

KANE, Pa., March 31.—Fire, which for a time threatened the entire business section of Kane, started in the Cohn block here early today and did damage estimated at $200,000.

The blaze, which was of undetermined origin, started in the upper stories of a business structure at 1:30. At 2 o'clock the building was a furnace and firemen devoted their attention to saving other buildings.

The following firms were burned out: Printz Clothing Company, Millin and Woods law offices, Thomas Paisley insurance office; Edward Copp, chiropractor; Lyceum dance hall, Palace billiard parlor and Block bowling alleys.

The Mullin & Woods law office is rated as having one of the most complete law libraries in the state and early loss estimates may be raised to a considerable higher figure by their report. All of their books were lost and, it was said, many editions cannot be replaced.

Firemen fought against odds, but were able to confine the blaze to the one structure despite a 40-mile gale which was sweeping showers of sparks over several blocks.

Salvation Army lassies were on hand with coffee and doughnuts for the firemen. They began their work within an hour after the alarm was sounded.

The Cohn block is located at the intersection of Fraley and Field streets, directly in the center of the business section.

With flames shooting at times 100 feet into the air observers were at a loss to account for the manner in which the firemen were able to hold the blaze to the one building.

HOMELESS, BUILDS FIRE; GIVEN 30-DAY SENTENCE

Homeless and out of work, John Rusnak, 29, built a fire in the basement of a three-story building at 863 Sawmill way late yesterday "just to keep warm." Firemen answered an alarm sounded by someone who saw the smoke and District Fire Chief Martin Loebig arrested Rusnak. In North Side Police Court today Rusnak was accorded by Magistrate E. M. Hough the privilege of enjoying the comforts of the workhouse for 30 days.

AUTOS SMASH, WRECK HOUSE

A truck and a touring car were wrecked and a house damaged last night when the two machines collided in East Ohio street near Millvale. The force of the collision threw one of the machines 50 feet and the other machine against the home of Mrs. Susie Shebal. Part of the house was torn away. Frank Swiger, of O'Brien street, Millvale, and John Atkinson, of Penn avenue, drivers of the machines, were charged with reckless driving and taken to the North Side Police Station after being treated at the Allegheny General Hospital for slight lacerations.

Will Wants to Be Envoy to Mexico

CINCINNATI, O., March 31.—When you get through discussing all the Republican candidates, and it comes out what's the matter with each one, why pick out one that nothing is the matter with, Dwight Morrow.

WILL ROGERS.

Being President is child's play compared to pacifying Mexico. He gave up something to be of service to his country. He is the biggest ad Wall street ever sent out, he almost makes 'em look respectable. If there ever was a regular guy he is it.

I have no ulterior motives in his election outside of the ambassadorship to Mexico myself, which few would envy me.

The above nomination don't belong in a joke column either.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

Raps Police And Pays $25

Precinct Detective Mike O'Connor heard strong words in a store at Fifth and Penn avenues.

"The police are thieves," he heard a stranger orate. "Half o' them have been in the penitentiary or the workhouse. They're pulling jobs themselves."

Mike arrested the speaker. Today in Frankstown Avenue Police Court the orator was fined $25. He said he was Elmer Eckhart, 34, of 134 Kirk street.

BACKING GIVEN PENSION BILL

Additional support was given the Dale-Lehlbach bill now under consideration by the Civil Service committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, in resolutions passed by several local fraternal bodies. The bill provides for optional retirement of Civil Service employes after 30 years' service on maximum annuities of $1,800 per year with salary deductions of 2½ per cent to maintain the disability and annuity fund. Resolutions were passed by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers' Club of Pittsburgh; George Westinghouse Commandery No. 567, Knights of Malta; Almona Council No. 1992 Security Benefit Association, and Lodge No. 46, L. O. O. M.

BADGE BRINGS CASH, BARS

William J. Harney, 24, of Rice street, North Braddock, possessed himself of a badge as Pennsylvania game warden. Displaying this fictitious authority, he obtained a revolver from Ralph McFarland of Wilkinsburg for $26, giving a bad check in exchange, and obtained $50 from A. A. Brenneman of Wilkinsburg and $29 from Robert McCallister of Pitcairn, giving them bad checks. Harney admitted all this in Criminal Court in pleading guilty to charges of impersonating an officer, false pretense and writing bad checks. Judge Joseph M. Swearingen sentenced him to the workhouse for one year.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH

British Film Representative In Hollywood Searching For Talent For English Studios

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.

ENGLAND'S first decisive step to compete with America in film production centers around the arrival of A. Morsby White, representative not only of the British National Film Corporation but of the British government. Mr. White has arrived in Hollywood all set to hire electricians, cameramen, directors, players and the other factors necessary for the making of motion pictures. He comes into our midst, they tell me, with a substantial bankroll ready to pay American prices if he can get the people he wants.

Doesn't seem possible that conservative England would ever agree to spend so much money. But the matter of competition in films has reached the point where England, Germany and France will have to spend money if they want to rival our American producers.

This British National Film Corporation is building six new studios and naturally it's important to fill them. Sidney Olcott was the first American director to join the British National and he seems well content, if one may believe his letters.

The British government has risen to the aid of the British film producers by insisting that 25 per cent of the pictures exhibited in England must have the British trademark.

While I am deep on this subject of British film production it is interesting to know that Adolphe Menjou, for all his plans to star in foreign films, comes back to Paramount. Arrangements were made with Mr. Menjou in New York to make three pictures on a one year's contract. Paramount must have come through on the matter of money.

There seems to be a general opinion that Sam Woods is entitled to the gold-plated laurel wreath for discovering more new talent than any other director in the business. It was he who started Johnny Mack Brown on his career in "The Fair Co-ed," Marion Davies' picture. It was he who first sponsored the team of George K. Arthur and Karl Dane. It was he who saw Eddie Nugent, a prop boy and brought him into the movies, and it was Sam who decided that Anita Page, one of the girls brought West by Harry Thaw, should have her chance. Mr. Woods also supervised the first Red Grange pictures. "What does this lead to?" you are asking. Merely that Sam has signed a new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Having made his plans for the future, Mr. Woods will now take a vacation while waiting for the return of Norma Shearer, meanwhile working on the script of "Ballyhoo," which he will direct for her.

Looking over studios in Hollywood we hear many little tidbits of news. One of them concerns James Kirkwood, who is sailing for London to play in a stage production of "The Barker." We also hear tell that Jean Hersholt will remain another year at Universal. Seems to me I heard something about a contract and Mr. Hersholt once before. Margaret Livingston and Polly Ann Young are now on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, a part of "The Bellamy Trial," which seems to grow bigger and better as it nears actual production. Eddie Quillan, the boy who made Cecil De Mille burst into loud laughter, is about to do his vaudeville act for Vitaphone at the Warner Studios.

There comes into our midst Thyra Samter Winslow, New York author. Thyra and the new husband reached here Wednesday and no youngster on his first visit to the circus was ever more excited than the young lady who wrote such sophisticated stories as "People Round the Corner," "Show Business," "Window Frames." Miss Winslow will either adapt "Glorifying the American Girl" or write an original. She certainly ought to know how to adapt the Ziegfeld "Follies" opera, having written so many stories of chorus girls.

Barthelmess as Twin Brothers in Picture

For the last week Richard Barthelmess has been a "couple of other fellows." Now, he is himself and still another fellow. This paradox in personalities is caused by the fact that two small boys essayed the roles of the two leading characters in "Roulette" in the prologue sequences which were photographed last week. The two boys were Ray and Roy Berendzen, juvenile thespians of three and a half years.

And now, Richard Barthelmess has commenced work on the main part of the story in which he plays twin brothers of conflicting temperaments, one black-haired and the other red, whence the name of the story, "Roulette," symbolizing the two colors of the well-known gambling device. Alfred Santell is directing.

MIGUEL LERDO DE TEJADA

Senor de Tejada is conductor of the Mexican Tipica Orchestra, which is to be an attraction in the Stanley next week.

Henry B. Walthall in Vitaphone Drama

Henry B. Walthall, who was one of the first stars of the cinema with his memorable role of the "little Colonel" in "The Birth of a Nation" has been added to the long list of film celebrities now appearing as satellites in the Vitaphone firmament.

Walthall has always been regarded as one of the leading character actors on the screen. In his Vitaphone appearance Walthall will be seen and heard in the leading role of a Hugh Herbert playlet, "Retribution." This is a story of an outcast who returns to the better life. It has already been seen on the vaudeville stage. In its Vitaphone production the dramatic points of "Retribution" are so stressed that while the story points a fine moral it is fundamentally a play with a punch in it.

Corrinne Griffith's Gown Costs $2,200

A single costume costing $2,200 has been designed and made for Corinne Griffith to wear in her starring role in First National's period drama, "The Divine Lady," a Frank Lloyd production on which final preparatory touches are now being completed.

The story is taken from E. Barrington's popular novel of the same name dealing with the immortal love of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson. Miss Griffith will enact the former role, supported by Victor Varconi as Lord Nelson. The period of the story is the latter part of the Eighteenth Century and the action takes place at various British seaport embassies in Europe.

Miss Griffith's gown was made of the rarest Chantilly lace and silk and is elaborately studded with jewels. It is to be worn at a diplomatic social function.

MIRTH, MUSIC IN BILLS

Monday evening "My Maryland" will begin the second and last week of its present engagement in the Alvin, making its sixth week here this season. It played for four weeks in the same theater in November, and the same company has returned.

Beginning Monday evening, Frank Craven in his domestic comedy, "The 19th Hole," will be in the Nixon for one week only, with the usual matinees.

Cortini, The Master Manipulator is booked for an appearance in the Davis vaudeville program next week. He is an illusionist. The screen will offer Madge Bellamy in "Soft Living."

"40,000 Miles With Lindbergh," a film that depicts the trip of Lindy to Paris, through the United States and also his latest Latin-American trip will be seen in Loew's Penn next week. Norma Shearer, in "The Latest from Paris" and a stage show, "Galloping On," also will be on the bill.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall completed their seventh co-featuring production in the farce "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," announced for the Stanley next week.

Lois Moran, Pittsburgh girl, appears in "The Irresistible Lover," co-starring with Norman Kerry. It will be in Loew's Aldine next week.

Harry Jackson, principal comedian in "Be Happy," next week's bill in the Academy, plays a German dialect role.

Richard Barthelmess, in "The Noose," is coming to the Grand screen next week.

Florence Vidor, in "Doomsday," is announced as the photoplay feature in the Olympic next week.

The Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, will preach Sunday evening on "Why Did Judas Betray Jesus?" Dr. Shelton will answer such questions as "Was It The Money?", "Why Did Jesus Choose Judas?", and "Is There Hope For Judas?" The double male quartets and James F. Croft, bari-

HIT PACT BREAK

Corporation, of Mr. Schwab and the Consolidation Coal Company of Mr. Rockefeller, made with the United Mine Workers in 1924, was a valid contract. He had previously asserted that the Jacksonville agreement which the Pittsburgh Coal Company made with the miners' union was also a valid contract and that the company had broken it in reducing wages before the three-year period for which the agreement was made had expired.

CONTRACTS LEGAL—WAGNER

"The contracts that the United Mine Workers made with the companies were enforceable, beyond question," said Senator Wagner.

"When I myself was on the bench I issued a writ compelling an association of manufacturers to carry out an agreement obtained by collective bargaining with a union of garment workers. The title of the case was 'Schlesinger against Singer,' Schlesinger having been the president of the union, and Singer head of the manufacturers organization. My action was sustained on appeal to higher courts.

"The old-fashioned notions are no longer entertained by intelligent judges when these collective bargaining agreements come up. They take into consideration the common sense view that when both sides agree to do something their action constitutes an enforceable contract."

Senator Gooding declared that the investigation had proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that certain coal companies had broken wage contracts with their miners. He named as among the companies which had violated their pledges the Pittsburgh Coal Company, the Consolidation Coal Company, in which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is a heavy stockholder, and the Bethlehem Mines Corporation, which is headed by Charles M. Schwab.

Senator Gooding said he had not been impressed by the denials of the officers of these companies that they had abrogated their agreements with the United Mine Workers.

"I read these agreements,' he said, "and I know a contract when I see one. These were legally and morally binding contracts, and there is no question that the companies broke them."

DEPLORE BREAKING FAITH

The Senate regards the breaking of faith with the workers by the coal companies as one of the most serious features of the situation. In the resolution sponsored by Senator Hiram Johnson of California, under authority of which Senate Interstate Commerce Committee is proceeding, the committee is specifically directed "to ascertain whether in the said coal fields wage contracts have been abrogated or repudiated."

It is one of the questions that received most consideration from the sub-committee headed by Senator Gooding that toured the mining camps of Western and Central Pennsylvania in February. In its formal report of that survey the sub-committee, in discussing its visit to the Pricedale camp of the Pittsburgh Coal Company with President J. D. A. Morrow of that company, said:

"At this point the committee learned that the Pittsburgh Coal Company was the first to break the Jacksonville agreement, Mr. Morrow maintained that the Jacksonville agreement was not binding and that they had a right to abrogate it at any time. He admitted that they had worked under it for something more than a year and then closed mines down for six months, and when they opened again the scale of wages was much below those paid under the Jacksonville agreement. As far as the committee was able to learn practically all the rest of the coal companies in the Pittsburgh district carried the Jacksonville agreement out in good faith and considered it a binding contract upon them as well as upon the miners. Mr. Morrow was the only operator we interviewed who seemed to look upon the Jacksonville agreement as a scrap of paper to be torn up and destroyed at the pleasure of the company."

Since then the Senators have heard the excuses of Pittsburgh Coal Company officials, who shifted the blame to Don Rose, their attorney, who they said advised them the contract was not legally binding.

LEGAL, SAYS ROSE

Rose, upon whom the responsibility for the abrogation of the Jacksonville agreement by that corporation has been placed by its officers, was asked about it.

"I just gave a legal opinion," he stated. "It was a legal opinion, you understand, and not one as to the morality of the matter."

After a pause he added:

"Not that I don't think that it was all right morally."

The senators have also heard the excuses of Rockefeller and Schwab, whose coal companies, particularly in West Virginia, have also been accused of pledge-breaking.

Senator Gooding yesterday pronounced a verdict of guilty against them. In support of his own opinion he called attention to the many operators in Pennsylvania and Ohio who have testified that they entered into virtually the same agreement with the United Mine Workers as the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Schwab and Rockefeller companies signed, and added that they regarded it as both a legal and moral obligation and lived up to it throughout the three years that it ran. Notable among the Pittsburgh companies that fulfilled the contract until it expired was the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation.

Senator Gooding is inclined to be conservative in his views. He is not noted in his own state as a champion of organized labor. But he feels very strongly in this case that the Miners' Union has been dealt with treacherously by the companies that abrogated the wage agreement, and that the companies should be made to suffer the odium that attaches to the breaking of pledges.

RETIRES

A. HAMBURGER, PRESIDENT

At the offices of the Hamburger Furniture Co., 927 Penn ave., Mr. Alex. Hamburger, president of the concern, announced that, at a meeting of the stockholders, it was decided to liquidate the business.

Mr. Hamburger, who is one of the pioneers in retail furniture circles in Pittsburgh, stated that his store was to discontinue business, because he felt it was time for him to retire from active work. He admitted that the negotiations, which had been mentioned in this newspaper recently, finally resulted in this decision to retire from the field.

The Hamburger furniture store, which occupies a large eight-floor building at 927 Penn ave., has long been regarded as a leading enterprise. The announcement that the company was to cease its activities occasioned great surprise in local mercantile circles. When asked when the business was to be closed, Mr. Hamburger stated that he was not ready to make that public. He said, however, that, as soon as all details were ready, the public would be informed of the future plans of the business.

April Fool Jokes and Love Jests

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HO! April First is with us again—charming day of twofold witchery!

Not only does April Fool's Day, as it is called, usher in early buds and blossoms, bird-notes and delicate greens of the Spring season, so that we sense even without feeling it in the air, that Spring is here! The day also rings with laughter! For is it not dedicated to nonsense?

Spring and laughter are an irresistible combination. No wonder love thrives at such a time.

It is well to remember, however, that even as there are Spring days and Spring days, so there are jokes and jokes. April days can be about the rawest of the year. And jokes, also, can be either sunshiny and light-hearted or poisoned with the very venom of evil.

LOVE thrives on and is closely allied with laughter and friendly jests. But love also may suffer and pine when it is too much subject to sarcasm, ill-humored teasing and violent practical jokes.

Romance, whether budding love, Spring sentimentality or matrimonial affection, is a favorite subject for would-be humorists.

It doesn't take much to make a girl or youth self-conscious and embarrassed over the wonderful new emotion, so rare, so strange, all-absorbing and non-understandable. A teasing remark may cause an agonized blush to mount Betty's cheeks, bringing more laughter and teasing. Suddenly self-conscious and shy, Betty will prove a stiff, stilted young hostess when Billy comes to see her.

As for Billy, the chances are he has been teased so unmercifully about Betty that he hardly dares face her. If he is particularly shy, he may walk around the block to avoid meeting the girl he loves. Joking is often merely light-hearted, thoughtless fun, yet it may have serious and even tragic consequences when love and romance are chosen as the subject of ridicule.

LOVE in its earlier stages is sensitive, fragile and easily wounded. Those who seem most flippant and "hard-boiled" may in reality be most sensitive. So even on April Fools' Day, it is well to use discrimination and discretion in your jokes. The seemingly innocent teasing which ridicules a girl's affection for her sweetheart, or makes a young man suddenly embarrassed and ashamed of his honest love for a girl, may prove the tiny rift within the lute which eventually will make the music mute, and end a shy friendship that promised well.

Then there is the ever-popular wedding joke! Of course, it is comparatively harmless fun to tie great bows of white ribbon to the waiting automobile which is to carry the newly-weds on the first lap of their honeymoon. It is equally funny, if a trifle hackneyed, to attach a staring sign, "Newly Married" to Pullman or steamer state-room. But the joking spirit easily gets beyond control, as at a recent wedding. As a great joke, the door of the room was locked where the groom waited alone while the bride changed to traveling clothes. The key was hidden. An hour's delay ensued, and the couple missed their train, causing them financial loss they could ill afford.

AT this moment there are countless aching hearts because of habitual teasing.

"My husband always jokes about his other girls," a worried little wife wrote me. She is kept much at home with her young baby, and is sometimes too tired to respond to a teasing mood. "Of course, I know he is only joking," she added. "But he teases me so much I sometimes wonder if what he says could be true!"

Many women are possessed with an eager desire to tease a man to make him jealous.

"I noticed you sat out several dances with one partner," a certain husband observed to his wife as he was driving her home from the country club.

"Yes," she replied. "You had better be jealous. You have cause."

As a matter of fact her partner, an old friend, had been telling her of his betrothal and asking her advice as to how he could best straighten out a misunderstanding which had arisen between him and his fiancee. This was the sole reason they talked with absorbed interest throughout three numbers by the orchestra.

Her purposely misleading reply aroused a sudden, murderous instinct of resentment and jealousy. In a flash, the man at her side seized her throat. Luckily, he controlled himself immediately and, thanks to good luck, did not wreck the car and kill both himself and her.

TEASING is considered great fun, practical jokes are supposed to be tremendously witty. But are they? That depends!

Analyze the joke you are planning. Does it contain any elements of meanness, brutality or cruelty? If it does, it is neither humorous nor amusing.

Sportsmanship in giving and taking jokes is the quality that prevents malice from masquerading as humor and hurting love, wounding gentle affection and doing damage in countless ways.

Your love will radiate joy, your home will ring with good-humored laughter, if only kindly jokes ever find expression there, and nothing that can wound is permitted to disturb the harmonious happiness of yourself and the man to whom you have given your heart and hand.

THE LOVE-LIGHT IN HER EYES

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"See where little Cupid lies
Looking babies in the eyes."

"Cleere are her eyes,
Like purest skies,
Discovering from thence
A babie there
That turns each sphere,
Like an intelligence." —Herrick.

When love looks into lovely eyes, back looks love again. The face that looks into the mirror is the face that looks out again. The Indian in the forest hanging his dark braids over a snow-water pool sees a dark face with braided hair looking back. He does not see golden hair and fairy coloring. The child that bends over the water-mirror of the lake sees its own child face, sees the same innocent, rounded, baby face that belongs to himself. He does not see the wise, half-troubled, worn face of an old man. The gay face of a girl who bends to study herself in a bright shop window as she passes sees a gay bright face looking back, the face of a young girl, her own face. Not the weary, dark, and sinful face of a troubled, bitter woman of the world.

What looks into the eyes looks back. Sometimes innocent, happy eyes woo you to look love into them, and back it comes to yourself again; endlessly. Look hate at the world, and the world's eyes darken for you, and glower back again. Look sunshine at it; and its million eyes brighten and twinkle back.

Half of girl-and-woman-kind are won to love you by the sweetness of the love that you have given them. Sweethearts grew by tasting the sweets that were offered; like a little girl testing the ardently-offered candy of a little boy. Young William looked Love into the eyes of Bettina. And out of her eyes looked Love again,

Cupid saw himself in two blue mirrors and laughed!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Some Aids To Spring Beauty

By MARIA JERITZA

SPRING is in the air!

Even on the windiest, coldest of these days there is a promise of glories to come in swelling leaf buds and the delicate greens that cover the ground with loveliness, while every now and then balmy days call us outdoors with an appeal not to be resisted.

I hope you will not try to resist the call to outdoors, for it is a call to loveliness and renewed youth. There is no reason why you, like Shakespeare's violets, should not "take the March winds with beauty."

But, to come down from the poetic to the prosaic, when March winds blow, be sure to use more than your usual quota of cold cream on your complexion, night and morning, to counteract the tendency of the skin to line and burn and freckle in cold wind and sun.

Let your new hat protect your eyes and face with at least a slight brim, otherwise the glare of the brilliant sunshine of springtime may inflame your eyes and powder your nose with freckles. Tan is fashionable this season, but no one wants to be freckled, even though freckles are, it is true, a sign of a fine, delicate skin.

UNFORTUNATELY, I cannot give you a formula that will surely remove these little golden flecks without in any way harming your skin. The sensible course, it seems to me, for the girl who freckles easily is to take moderate preventive measures, such as wearing a brimmed hat, long sleeves in the street, even in mid-summer, and gloves, and dusting a fresh coat of powder over her face before going out. A bit of cocoanut oil may be massaged well into the skin before exposure, and this in turn should be covered with powder.

Washing the skin each morning and evening with the following lotion, which should in turn be removed with cold cream after three minutes, should keep your freckles pretty well bleached:

Fresh lemon juice, 1 ounce.
Powdered borax, ½ dram.

This lotion should be mixed freshly every day or two, because lemon juice will not keep indefinitely. If you have no scales at home to weigh the measurements you will find that a tablespoonful of lemon juice and one-third teaspoonful of borax will prove about right.

LONG walks in the fresh air every day, rain or shine, dressed suitably, will do more for your fresh color and clearness of complexion than any formula.

Eat more of green salads, fresh vegetables and fruit, [illegible] starches and meat than you do during the winter and drink even more water than usual. In this way you will give your system and complexion their annual housecleaning.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

U.S. Senator from New York

Important That Youth Know the Facts of Life

IN AN address the other day, President Hibben, of Princeton, said: "The youth of today is not enthusiastic about anything—it is bored."

DR. COPELAND

That may be, but we need not worry over it. Youth is pretty sophisticated these days. There may be advantages in it.

It is natural for us of another generation to feel hurt or disturbed, certainly, over what is done now so differently than it was "when we were young." Somehow we feel it is all wrong, that the young folks should now be just as we were.

How can they be the same when the world is so different? We had no electric lights to turn night into day. We had no automobiles to annihilate distance. We had no movies to give us familiarity with the wide world.

The telephone, the radio, the airplane, the illustrated daily newspaper—all these have conveyed knowledge to the young folks of today that we had to wait for till we passed middle life. They have access to books and information that were locked away from us.

In short, youth of today is sophisticated. No wonder youth is bored. With Alexander, youth has no more worlds to conquer.

What should we do about our young folks? What can we do? Do we need to do anything?

I have thought a lot about this since the beginning of the World War. As health commissioner of New York City during the period that revolutionized human thought, I was brought face to face with terrible facts about health and disease.

We learned things we had never dreamed of until we examined 10,000,000 of young men in the draft boards. We came to know that thousands and tens of thousands of our youth are unfit physically. Then, in my own case, when I came to apply this knowledge to the millions under my care, it brought home an appreciation of the responsibilities which rest upon parents, physicians, ministers, teachers, all who come into intimate contact with youth.

If youth is bored, perhaps youth can be aroused by being given exact knowledge of the facts of life. It has felt the effects, but perhaps even its sophistication has not reached into the causes.

There are many things youth should know—important things, exact things. Most important of all the facts of sex, the fundamental, underlying facts of sex.

As I view it, there is too much "thou shalt not" in our dealings with youth and not enough honest explanation of the reasons for things. Dogmatic assertion will get nowhere with modern youth. It must have the real truth.

How are we to teach the facts? I wish you would write me your views. I have mine, or think I have.

By this I mean that my heart fails me sometimes when I set out boldly to teach what I think youth should know. Yet I am confident youth should know.

What shall we do about it?

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALL THE SAD YOUNG WOMEN

BEHOLD, among the damsels of Babylon, there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

* * *

For the damsels are without joy and without dance-partners and without beaus and without lovers!

* * *

They sit alone with their own hearth-sides and embroider doilies for their Hope Chests. But, what profiteth it them though Hope Chests be larger, if the HOPES be smaller and fewer, with each season?

HELEN ROWLAND

Alas, alas, wail the damsels of Babylon, the world is full of men; but men are full of cynicism and new complexes! And how shall ANY woman hope to please one of them?

* * *

For, lo, if she respondeth to a man's kisses and permitteth his pawings, he saith, "Ho-hum! She is like all the rest!" And he departeth from her side and she seeth him no more.

* * *

But, if she rejecteth his kisses and put-down his impertinence, he saith, "Ho-hum! She is a flat tire!" And he departeth in haste and returneth no more.

* * *

If she is tender and gentle and full of come-hitherneds, he is filled with suspicion, and fleeth from her in affright, lest she HOOK him.

* * *

But if she is cool and indifferent, he is filled with soreness and injured vanity—and fleeth in search of a warmer maiden.

If she is simple and guileless, and drinketh not the cocktail nor laugheth at the spicy joke, she soon yawneth and is full of boredom.

* * *

But, if she is a "live wire" and a "wise dame," who handeth him a snappy line, he soon tireth and is full of ennui.

* * *

If she is independent and efficient, he cryeth "Feminist!" and permitteth her to carry her own suitcase and light her own cigarets.

* * *

But, if she is weak and helpless and clinging, he cryeth "Mid-Victorian!" and "Baby Vamp!" and passeth her up for a newer model.

If she is a Highbrow and a Wit, he dreadeth her as a small boy dreadeth an education. But if she is a Wooden Head and a Dumbbell, he kisseth her once and forgetteth her, forever!

* * *

How, then, shall any woman seek to please the MEN of Babylon? For, their hearts are covered with mail and their emotions are insulated, and their curiosity is fed up.

* * *

Why, then, do the damsels of Babylon continue to embroider doilies, wherewith to fill their Hope Chests?

FOR THE LOVELORN

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Still Wishing

DEAR MISS GALE:

Very few places good advice can be gotten nowadays. Girls either seek it from some source not very commendable or get none at all. I think your advice is wonderful and anyone can readily see it always brings happiness. I am a girl of 22, a college graduate, blond and rather popular with the opposite sex. Have had three proposals and was engaged once, but broke that because I did not love the fellow. Now, I'm not telling this to boast but to show that I'm not a wall flower. When in my high school days I "walked home" from places such as church, parties and school activities with a boy I thought rather nice at the time. But as we grew older and he stopped school we drifted apart. I did not think much of it then for I was so busy having a good time with other nice boys. To my girl's mind they all seemed nice. But now I get tired of them after I go with them a while. The other evening I saw this boy, or rather man, on the street but did not speak, although he tipped his hat. I knew then he was the only one for me. I know that he does not go with any girl steady, and have been wondering if he ever thinks of me. Now, Miss Gale, my question is, "How can I get this young man's friendship again? Would it be proper to write to him? Or what should I do?

STILL WISHING.

Your refusal to speak may have forfeited your chance to win this man's friendship, my dear. It was a deliberate snub, and few men care to risk that a second time. How can you be so sure that you like him, since you don't really know the sort of man he is now? Perhaps if you made an effort to be very friendly the next time you meet him, he will overlook your rudeness.

Undecided

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for some time. Now I have come to you for advice. I am in love with a boy two years older than me. I am 15. You may think I am foolish, but I just adore him. I try to forget him, but I can't. It is impossible. Here is my problem: Sometimes when I go to the show he is there. He will wait about a half hour then send a friend of his up to tell me to sit with him. But I won't do it. I always say, "Tell him to come here." But he won't come back. About two months ago he nearly always came back when I said that. I wonder if he doesn't care for me as he did? When I pass him on the street he smiles at me and I smile back, but neither speak. The trouble with me is I am too bashful when I'm near him. I wonder if he cares for me as much as I care for him. I have been out with him about seven times. Miss Gale, do you think I should go and sit with him when he asks me? Or do you think I should go with other boys and make him jealous. He used to be awfully jealous over me, but I don't know if he is now or not. I am

UNDECIDED.

My dear, you are much too young to be worrying about whether or not a boy cares for you. Speak to him when you see him, of course, but don't go moving around the theater at his beck and call.

Two Young Girls

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two young girls of 18 and are very pretty. We both have many girls and fellows to go with, but we always run together. Here is our problem. We are both in love with the same fellow and I know he can't have both of us. Neither of us know him, but we have come to you to see if you can tell how to gain his friendship. I know he likes both of us as we do him. Do you think we should speak to him first or let him speak first? We agree with you about the girls that are smoking and drinking. We both wish you very good luck.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS.

But, my dears, what make you think this boy likes you so well? If he did, he would find some way of being introduced to you, and that is about the only way such a friendship could begin. You aren't really in love with him, or course, because you don't know him at all.

One Such Discarded Wife

DEAR MISS GALE:

This is written for the sake of the future happiness of the lady signing herself "Tip Top Tip." She says the man who wants to marry her is 21 and she 24. As one who knows from actual experience, I say "wait." To marry at those ages, the lady will be an old woman when her husband is yet a young man, and sooner or later, the lady will be staying home, sweeping, scrubbing, tending babies, etc., while her hubby will be running around with his friends as he calls them, having a good time. And this will be her let even though he is one of the best. Of course, if the lady is independent financially, and remains so, she may have a chance to be happy. But if she is dependent on her husband for her money, she will surely have a hectic life. The lady is old enough to marry, but the boy certainly is not. As long as a man isn't sure of a girl, he will treat her well. And as long as he knows the girl can make a living for herself, if necessary, he can not be sure of her.

ONE SUCH DISCARDED WIFE.

I cannot quite agree that three years' difference in ages is too much, always, but I am with you in saying that a boy of 21 is too young to marry, whether the girl be older or younger.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Frigid Blasts Hardly Inviting for Those Returning From the South

SOME of these folks who have left the sunny skies of Florida or California or Georgia to come back home to the beauties of a northern spring must imagine they have made a mistake in the calendar, and have strayed into the midst of a snowy Pittsburgh winter. Yesterday's biting cold and its half-rain-half-snow is hardly an inviting atmosphere for one who has been South for several months, and one scarcely knows what kind of weather to expect today, even though it is starting out with sunshine.

During the last week several families have returned home, among them the Harry C. Boughmans, of Woodland road, Sewickley, who have been spending some time in Augusta, Ga. They arrived here, I believe, the early part of the week. Mrs. Tracy Kramer and her children, with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Edward Kramer, also got back early in the week to their Sewickley home. They had been stopping in Mt. Dora, Fla. Other home-comers are the Lucien Pattons, of Grove street, Sewickley, who have come back after spending five weeks in Paris. And still another is Miss Elizabeth T. Wardrop, of Academy avenue, Sewickley, who got back on Wednesday from the South. She spent some time in Augusta and also visited Dr. and Mrs. Dewitt B. Nettleton in Pinehurst.

I understand that Mrs. Howell C Cooper, of Sewickley, is visiting her sister in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The engagement of a local girl to an out-of-town man is being announced today in the betrothal of Laura Gardner Provost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Provosts, of Beacon street, to Oliver B. Merrill, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Merrill, of Summit, N. J.

Laura is a Winchester School girl and was also graduated from Smith College. Her fiance is an Amherst man and is now attending the Columbia University law school.

The morning musicales which Mrs. Taylor Allderdice and some of her friends are sponsoring have proved to be even more popular than their patronesses had expected them to be. The third was given this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. John E. Nelson in Murtland avenue, and an exceptionally fine program was given, I hear.

The "piece de resistance" was a group of readings from English plays given by Mrs. E. Martin Browne, wife of one of the instructors in the Carnegie Tech drama school, and formerly a well-known actress in London. Mrs. Browne was known as Henzie Raeburn in England, and she called her program today "An English Actress in English Plays." They were given, as might be expected, in the most finished style and were enthusiastically received by her audience.

The musical half of the program included several numbers for two pianos, some for eight hands and other for four hands. The former group was played by Mrs. Allderdice, Mrs. Nelson, Miss Christine Griggs and Miss Marcella Pallos, and the two groups for four hands were played by Mrs. John E. Freeman and Mrs. George Willock, and by Miss Pallos and Miss Anita Freund.

There were also several violin numbers by Miss Mary Redmond, and William Gillespie, boy soprano of the Church of the Ascension choir, sang, with Mrs. W. Bailey McCreery as his accompanist.

Mrs. Mary Barchfield Geyer, of Carrick, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen Anna Geyer, to Ray Scott Tannehill, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott Tannehill, of Duquesne. An early spring wedding is planned.

Miss Margaret Caskey, of Bartlett street, is leaving this week-end for New York to meet her niece, Miss Elizabeth C. Zeigler, a senior at Wellesley College, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Zeigler. They will be guests of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Gillespie, for the Easter vacation.

Last night at 6 o'clock the wedding of Miss Ruth Olive MacEwen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Allen MacEwen, of Mt. Lebanon, and William James Caldwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Caldwell, of New Castle, was solemnized in the Mt. Lebanon Lutheran Church. The bride was gowned in white charmeuse and lace, with a tulle veil secured with old family lace, and she carried a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her attendants wore period frocks of taffeta in the pastel shades with side trains of tulle, and carried bouquets of Dresden flowers. The maid of honor, Miss Edna MacEwen, sister of the bride, wore pink; and the bridesmaids were Miss Virginia MacEwen, another sister, in green; Miss Anna MacEwen, also a sister, in blue; Miss Ethel Rose of New Wilmington, in yellow; and Miss Helen Davies of Crafton, in orchid. The flower girl was Jean MacEwen, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Donald MacEwen of Sunset Hills, wearing a frock consisting of a lace bodice and a petaled skirt in taffeta and tulle in the pastel colors. She carried a basket of rose petals. Barton E. Richards of New Castle, was best man and the ushers included Orville Brown, John D. Kennedy, Edward E. Grotefend of New Castle, and J. Donald MacEwen of Sunset Hills. Miss Loretta Elsler sang and Miss Henrietta Bricker played the wedding music. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell will take an Eastern motor trip and after June 6, will be at their new home, "Verenada," on the Wilmington road, New Castle.

SPONSORING MUSICALES

MRS. TAYLOR ALLDERDICE

WOMAN'S CITY CLUB'S FASHION SHOW OPENS

Bewilderingly beautiful in its opulence nad magnitude, the Woman's City Club's first annual spring fashion revue opened last night in the William Penn Hotel and was continued this afternoon, with showings at 2 and 4 o'clock. The fashion parade, of course, was the important feature, but none the less interesting in their beauty and variety were the brilliant displays from the Pittsburgh shops which filled the corridors and the ante rooms on the seventeenth floor of the hotel.

The revue is a new undertaking of the Woman's City Club, an organization that is known as the hospitality club, the friendliness of which to "home trade" has won it the commendation of Pittsburgh merchants. And so, when the black velvet curtains were drawn last night and Pittsburgh's loveliest maidens and children walked down the modernistic runway, it was to show, in all the exquisite colors of a Paris spring, the offerings, both domestic and imported, of Pittsburgh's own stores and shops. Every article of women's apparel, from the frothiest and daintiest of night gowns, negligees and pajamas to wraps, sports wear, afternoon and evening gowns were displayed and there was even a trap shooter's costume (worn by Miss Frances Burdick) and an aviatrix costume (by Miss Josephine Nicola). Miss Mary Vilsack appeared in the white satin and veil of a bride and her sister, Miss Gladys Vilsack, was in dull green gold tulle as maid of honor, while little Daisy Vilsack wore a flower girl's frock of white lace. The tiniest mannekins evoked many "ohs" and "ahs" from the audience for their unexpected self possession and precision.

Every table in the ballroom was reserved last night and here were seated members of Pittsburgh society watching the parade of the models lingering over an ice or coffee or a cigaret sold by Miss Geraldine West and her sub-debutante aides. The revue was opened by a valse ballet presented by Miss Nancy Metcalfe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Metcalfe, of Howe street. Mrs. Edward Vosel Babcock was general chairman for the revue, but Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, alert president of the club, is generally accredited with having conceived the idea and putting it into motion.

CHAMPIONS LOSE, 5-2, IN 2ND GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, March 31. —Aroused over the prospects of a repetition of what happened when they challenged the Yankees last October, the Pirates today are putting an extra hitch in their belts in an effort to flag down the Cubs, who have twice floored the reigning National League champions. The Bruins, with Altoona Pat Malone in the hero role, won yesterday's hard fight by the score of 5 to 2.

Manager Bush of the Pirates had two real aces up his sleeve this morning and the chances are that Donie will play both before the afternoon is over. Donie intends of use John Miljus and Carmen Hill in the third game of the interesting set at Wrigley Field. If Miljus is as good as he was a few days ago in Oakland, the Bruins are in for some baffling moments. Percy Lee Jones, lanky southpaw, is on the books to twirl for the enemy.

Just before yesterday's contest began I was introduced to Pat Malone by Captain Grimm of the Cubs. A speed ball king with the Minneapolis club last year, Pat was purchased by the Cubs while American Association fans proclaimed him as a wonder worker of a boy.

"I'm from Altoona," said Pat as he prepared to warm up to trim the Bucnos. Pat, therefore, should sell a few more papers in the important town on the main line, for he will get the headlines on the merit of a contest that has set the Pirate and Cub camps agog. But for a little

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

FOLLOWING reports of the splendid form that Catcher Earl Smith of the Pirates is showing this spring, a story comes from the coast to the effect that the Pittsburgh club had decided to fire Smith at the end of last season, but was induced to keep him by three of his pitching teammates who went to the front and interceded for him.

Earl Smith

But for the action of the slab trio, the tale continues, the Bucs would be without a real catcher at present, as Johnny Gooch has been ill and the others, it is asserted, have not been showing anything to warrant the expectation that they will develop into big league backstops.

IT WOULD be a pretty little yarn with a nice sentimental flavor, if it were true, but one flaw in it is that is without foundation.

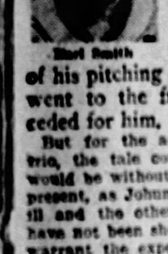
The Pittsburgh club never had the slightest intention of dropping Smith, and even if some of his teammates had interceded for him, which none of them did, the action would not have been necessary.

At no time after the Dave Bancroft incident, nor at any other stage of the season, was the confidence of President Dreyfuss or Manager Bush in the Arkansas receiver shaken to the slightest extent.

Bush never wavered in his support of Smith. He continued to rate him as one of the most valuable men on the club by reason of his hard hitting, aggressiveness and catching ability, and when asked on several occasions if he intended to retain Earl for 1928 he replied unhesitatingly in the affirmative.

And each time he was backed up by President Dreyfuss.

BUT there is even more convincing evidence that the Corsair bosses never entertained any thought of discarding Smith, for, though the Pittsburgh club did not make public at the time its operations in that direction, it is known that Earl, like a number of other Pirate players, was offered and signed a 1928 contract LAST FALL, at the time when the local management, according to rumor, was trying to get rid of him.



Barney Dreyfuss.

"How about signing now for 1928 instead of waiting until spring?" asked President Dreyfuss after calling Smith into his office.

"I'll be willing to sign a contract with this club for life," the catcher replied.

That will give an idea as to how terribly "strained" the relations were between the club and the catcher.

NOR was Smith's name even mentioned in any of the trade talk involving the Pittsburgh club during

Lomski Defeats Sekyra; Will Get Loughran Bout

LEO'S REP SCARES OHIOAN

By FRED KEATS,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Joe Sekyra was not much of a match for Leo Lomski in the Garden last night. The youngster had only two rounds of the 10 in his favor. Lack of experience beat Sekyra. The youngster had plenty of stuff but was afraid to show it.

He was confident enough until he got into the ring. Once face to face with the coast clouter, Young Joe lost his nerve and made a horrible showing.

By virtue of his one-sided victory over the Dayton youth, Leo will be given another chance to wrest the light heavyweight title from Tommy Loughran, the champion, in a bout sometime in June.

A crowd of 12,508 paying customers kicked in $40,722 to see what turned out to be a bigger disappointment than any of the much abused heavyweight eliminations. There was not an exciting moment at any stage of the proceedings, due to Sekyra's cautious tactics.

Young Joe had weight, height, reach, speed and hitting power in his favor. The weight advantage did not amount to much, while his superior speed was used merely

Green Cab Bannedby League

By TOM BIRKS.

The Green Cab baseball team was denied admittance to the County League at a secret meeting of the circuit officials last night.

Their great strength, rather than any weakness, is believed to have occasioned the Cabbies being banned. Green Cab won the County League championship in 1926 and planned to put another strong club in the field this season after a year's absence from the semi-pro ranks. Bellevue, Dormont, Homewood and Beltzhoover, the four clubs which are to comprise the league this season, made it plain at last night's session that they do not wish to build up to Green Cab's level.

Thus far all 1928 County League activities have been shrouded in secrecy. All meetings have been secret meetings and efforts have been made to deny the public any knowledge of league plans. In view

DELANEY TO BOX JACK SHARKEY

NEW YORK, March 31.—(INS.)—Articles have been signed for a fight between Jack Sharkey of Boston and Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, on April 30 at the Garden. The fight is scheduled for 15 rounds.

Sharkey's manager, Jack Buckley arrived from Boston yesterday and signed the articles for Sharkey. Delaney's manager, Joe Jacobs is expected to sign today, Garden officials stated.

Sharkey was beaten by Johnny Risko in his last appearance in the Garden in a heavyweight elimination bout, and Delaney lost to Tom Heeney of New Zealand in another of Rickard's proposed eliminations a week or two previous.

BUCS SELL MORRISON, HAEFFNER AND GOTTLEBER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, March 31. — The punishment of Johnny Morrison, famous curve-ball pitcher of the Pirates, ended and was greatly alleviated last night when the Pittsburgh management announced that Johnny had been sold outright to the Montreal Club of the International League. Morrison left the Buccos without leave last year and was placed on the suspension list.

Johnny Morrison

Co-incident with the disposition of Jughandle Johnny, the Pirate owners gave out the sale of Catcher Bill Haeffner Third Baseman George Gottleber. Haeffner goes to the Giants over the waiver route, while Gottleber was sold outright to the Fort Worth club of the Texas League.

The servitude of Morrison comes to an end, yet the passing of the curve-ball star carries what might suggest an added penalty. In other words, Morrison seems still to have the stuff necessary to win in the majors, but Johnny is now a minor leaguer, although he may be better off in Montreal. The metropolis of Canada should sport a good team and with George Stallings in charge of things, there will be a major league flavor, perchance.

Morrison recently applied for reinstatement. He will be eligible for play 30 days after the date of application.

The passing from the Pirates of Bill Haeffner was not entirely unexpected. The impression among the players concerning Bill was that while he seems to be a fine receiver, his batting is doubtful. John McGraw evidently thinks that Haeffner will help his club. In any case, the Pirates are pleased that Haeffner has gone to another big league club, as he is well liked.

LOCAL RING CARD PLEASES FANS

The best balanced card they have been offered in a long time at a local club is the general size-up of the fans with regard to the show booked for Motor Square Garden Monday night.

Rudy Ceder and Jack Katkish are slated for an eight-round windup renewal of their knockdown orgy of a few weeks ago and Jack McFarland of Wilkinsburg, who has not boxed at Motor Square in many months, boxes Joe Elrene of the North Side in the semi-final over the same distance.

Young Rudy of Charleroi and Sig Keppen of Beaver Falls meet for six rounds and Joe Louder and Jack Unglo are down for a similar meeting. The four-round opener will be between Tony Azarra of the East End and Eddie Schuster of Sharpsburg.

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

Sun-Tele Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 31.—Earl Smith has been running wide open in the series with the Cubs. The well-known Pirate catcher has a habit of jumping about behind batters in an effort to unruffle them. He has done everything within the law with Kiki Cuyler and Hack Wilson at the plate, but the two stars seem to have cured Earl to some extent.

IN Thursday's game Wilson scored heavily over Oil of the Ozarks. Hack came up in the fourth round with Cubs on the paths and the Pirates leading, 4 to 0. Smith heckled Wilson and the count was two and two, two outs when Hack turned the tables, completely upsetting the whole Pirate club.

"THE score is now 4 to 0, Smitty," quote Hack, "but after this pitch it is going to be 4 to 2." And then as Kremer delivered the ball Hack took a country swing and planted the white rocket high up in the bleachers. Naturally Smith was cooled off. It was Hack's turn to strut, and when he came up in the seventh with the tieing and winning runs on the bases, the Home Run King remarked to Smith.

"THIS game is just as good as over, Earl." And Hack followed through with a double down the right field line scoring two runs. Paul Waner juggled the ball just long enough to allow Cuyler to score from first.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Appearing drawn, sallow, weak and emaciated from a six weeks' siege of influenza and its devastating after effects, Walter Johnson, hero of every American baseball fan, and now manager of the Newark Internationals, has has been brought to Washington from the Southern training camp territory to take a bed in Emergency Hospital in an endeavor to effect a recovery.

The great American pitcher, while a very sick man, seemed to be in buoyant spirits as he greeted the little knot of intimate friends and newspapermen who met him at the depot on his arrival. Johnson was allowed to walk out of the car on the arms of friends and his physician, but was not permitted to walk to his automobile, being propelled in a wheel chair.

Dr. Harry Kaufman, the Washington Club physician, when asked as to the time required for Johnson's recovery, would hazard only a guess that it would require weeks. Dr. Kaufman said that Walter is suffering from an infection of the intestinal tract, and that time alone would tell when medical science and care would restore him to the game which he has graced for two decades.

Accompanying Johnson to Washington besides Dr. Kaufman were Clark Griffith, president of the Washington ball club, who looks on Johnson as a son, and Mrs. Griffith.

to get as far away as possible from the firing-line.

His hitting ability was only apparent in brief flashes due to his fear of a counter.

If the new rule against holding had been enforced by Referee Arthur Donovan the fight would not have lasted two rounds. Running and holding formed the basis of Joe's plan of battle. He just didn't have the nerve to stand up to his more experienced opponent.

Noting Sekyra's anxiety to keep as far away as possible, Lomski strode to his corner at the end of the first round with a confident grin. "This kid is not so much," he seemed to be thinking.

There was nothing like a knockdown during the 10 rounds. Each period was an exact duplicate of all the others.

Every time they came together Joe would grab Leo's left glove and hang to it like a drowning man. But Joe always overlooked Leo's right so that Leo would pound away with the free hand like he was beating a carpet during spring housecleaning.

At times when Sekyra stepped running and holding he did right well. He won the third and tenth rounds by superior boxing and hitting.

between Putney and Mortlake-on-the-Thames.

Cambridge thus won its thirty-ninth victory over its ancient rivals. Oxford has had 40 triumphs. One race was a dead heat.

Cambridge won by 10 lengths.

The issue was never in doubt. At the start the Cambridge eight forged to the front and at the end of the first mile was one and one-half lengths in the lead.

TRAIL FROM START

At the second mile, Oxford was five and one half lengths in the van.

The next mile was hotly contested, Oxford slowly creeping up on the victors until at the third mile it was only four lengths behind.

Then came a tremendous spurt by the Cambridge crew and a drive to the finish which put 10 lengths of water between the rival boats.

The victory of Cambridge was generally expected but the ease with which its eight swept in to victory was rather a surprise. An hour before the start at 9:45 o'clock this morning, the victors had been established as three to one favorites.

Because of overcast skies and the earliness of the race, the event was not witnessed by as large a crowd as usually appears to witness the sons of England's two greatest universities do battle for rowing supremacy.

Nevertheless the observation trains which followed the crews along the river were thronged. The Thames was dotted with a myrid of craft of all sizes and types which followed the oarsmen to the finish.

The raggedness of the performance of the defeated crew contrasted sharply with the brilliant oarsmanship of the victors. Over the entire course, the Cambridge crew maintained a perfectly precisioned thirty-six stroke to the minute beat.

The water was smooth over the first two miles of the course but a brisk wind blew up during the latter part of the race and made the surface rather choppy.

The Oxford men were obviously exhausted at the finish while the Cambridge crew appeared to be perfectly fresh.

Among the spectators were the King and Queen of Afghanistan, who are now visiting England.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

the winter. Other managers were given to understand by Skipper Bush that Earl was not on the market.

Catchers who can hit the ball with the power that the Arkansan puts into his wallops when he is batting normally are too scarce to warrant letting one go.

Smith ought to be more valuable to the Bucs this year than ever. His work may not have been up to his standard last year by reason of his long suspension and some injuries later, but he is in great shape at present, according to word from California, is hustling every minute and is walloping the ball in the style that makes him one of the big guns of the Buccaneer attack.

If spring signs are not misleading he is going to have a big year, and that will mean a whole lot to the Bucs.

THE nearness of the baseball season was indicated at Pirate headquarters yesterday, when Secretary S. E. Watters of the Pittsburgh club attended to a detail that amounts to "tossing the gloves into the ring." He shipped to St. Louis the traveling uniforms of the Buccaneers, which will be worn by the Bushmen in the opening game of the pennant race in the Moun City one week from next Wednesday.

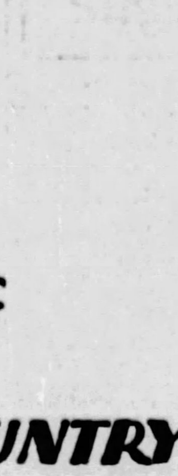
So the battle togs today will be on the scene of the opening fray today to await the coming of the Corsairs, who are still far away on the Pacific Coast.

IT WAS not necessary to purchase new uniforms for the Pirates this spring.

It is the custom of clubs appearing in a world series to buy new uniforms for the October classic and then save them for the following season.

That's what the Pittsburgh club did. It bought 30 new home uniforms and the same number of traveling suits for the 1927 world series, and will use them in the 1928 pennant race.

THIS matter of uniforms has served to show that, while the Bucs got a front-rank player in Sparky Adams, as far as quality is concerned, they did not get very much in the matter of quantity.



Sparky Adams.

That Sparky is one of the smallest players in captivity was made clear when they tried to find a uniform for him among those bought last fall. There wasn't one suit among the 30 assorted sizes that would even come close to fitting him, so it was necessary to get an extra traveling suit and an extra home suit made to his special order.

So there were 21 uniforms in the lot shipped to Pittsburgh's starting point in the flag race yesterday instead of only the 30 purchased last fall.

WHEN the Pittsburgh hockey team is transferred to Cleveland next winter, don't be surprised if Odie Cleghorn goes with it as manager. It is understood that the new owners of the outfit are very eager to have Cleghorn remain in charge of it, and there is believed to be a strong probability that Odie will come to terms with them within the next few days.

It is doubtful if Cleghorn's class as a leader was fully appreciated by the local owners.

When a team that has failed to win a game out of its 11 played turns in and makes such a remarkable uphill fight that it regains all lost ground and qualifies for the titular play-offs by finishing in third place, a money position, it means that more than the playing ability of the skaters themselves has entered in the achievement.

IT MEANS that they have been ably and wisely led by a born commander who knows his stuff from A to Z, and that in addition to making them play smart hockey he has kept them so encouraged through a gloomy period and has kept them so filled with his own never-give-up spirit that through his influence they continued to fight hard in the face of conditions that ordinarily would have caused them to lose hope and let down.

Odie Cleghorn.

Cleghorn accomplished one of the greatest managerial feats in modern hockey in landing the Pirates in third place after their poor start, particularly in the face of a schedule that was evidently made for the box office rather than for the good of the team, and it is not surprising that Cleveland wants him as well as the pick of the players.

It indicates that there are some men with hockey sense among the Cleveland promoters, men who know what's what in the ice game.

Cleghorn himself, who leaves today for Canada, will not admit that there is anything "on," but it is learned from other sources that a Cleveland man conferred with him here and the general belief is that he tried to sign Odie and probably will succeed later.

The Clevelanders will have taken a big step toward getting the right kind of hockey if they land the former local pilot.

Berlenbach's Wife May Contest Divorce

Mrs. Berlenbach, who was married last April, obtained a separate maintenance following a separation last January. She declared the reported divorce came as a complete surprise to her.

slip in the second frame, the big boy from the railroad center stood to blank the champions. Malone worked the entire distance and he was going along like a star when the curtain fell on the springtime picture.

Yes, folks of Altoona and points east and west, Pat gave the Chicago and Los Angeles boys something to write about. He showed the Bushwackers a fast ball that was unusual and the manner in which he performed clearly indicated that the young man is no novice.

Another crowd of 6,000 or better came out to cheer the two teams and to give special ovations to Kiki Cuyler, Hack Wilson and Lloyd Waner. Cuyler is cheered every time he comes to the plate as is Hack of Martinsburg. Little Lloyd also is a big number with the populace.

The spirit of the battle bleaded with the ideal baseball weather. Capt. Charlie Grimm and his men are on the warpath, it would seem. Grimm today kicked up a lot of fuss with the umpires, the spectacle as a whole being a reminder of a fight between flag champions in the middle of summer.

Skipper Donie picked Joe Dawson to start for the Pirates, but the pitching favors of the day, so far as the Pirates were concerned went to Lester Lefty Bartholomew, late of the Columbia Club of the South Atlantic League. This young husky of the lefthand slants relieved a wild and ineffective Dawson in the fourth inning. Lester continued throughout the remaining frames like a real major leaguer. In view of the tense elements of the game the showing of the rookie should be regarded as significant. Some times it is hard to stir up enthusiasm for a defeated pitcher, but in many respects Bartholomew outshone the slab performance of Malone.

A little study of the last six frames of the contest shows that the youngster yielded only one hit and in five of the six frames he retired the enemy in order. Johnny Butler's single in the eighth was the only thing to break the clever continuity of Barthalomew's pitching.

So today, Donie Bush and his pals were singing the praises of the quiet southpaw. There is no doubt that Lefty pitched himself into the good graces of the directors of the team, indeed, he is apt to be retained as one of the new sharpshooters.

Riggs Stephenson slammed out a pretty hit in the first inning with two out to score Cuyler and Wilson. Dawson walked in another tally in the inning. Safeties by Hartnett, English, Maguire and Cuyler in the third gave the Cubs their other markers. Barnhart's double in the second followed a fielding slip and was the pivotal punch of the only runs scored by the Pirates.

LINDY OCEAN HOP RUMOR DENIED

WASHINGTON, March 31. — (INS.) — While Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was in St. Louis yesterday, en route to San Diego to inspect his new plane, various rumors continued to circulate about the capital as to the future plans of the flier.

One of them was that Lindbergh would again essay to fly the Atlantic this summer. Another was that he would attempt a trans-Pacific flight, San Francisco to Honolulu, thence to Manila and thence to Tokio.

Officials of the state and war departments who conferred with Lindbergh this week scoffed at these rumors. They declared the Atlantic flight story to be "ridiculous," and declared their disbelief in the Pacific rumor.

"The story that Lindbergh is to again try to fly the Atlantic is ridiculous on the face of it," said one official, who is to some extent in the flier's confidence. "He has done it once, why should he risk his life in a valueless repetition? Anyway, Lindbergh has already stated publicly he would not again try to cross the Atlantic because it would add nothing to what already is known."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 31.—Friends and backers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday denied having any knowledge of his reported plans to fly from the Pacific coast to Japan and another purported plan of the transatlantic flier to start a 'round-the-world flight from the Atlantic seaboard with his first stop somewhere in Germany. Lindbergh was closely guarded against all but a very few friends at the country home of Harry Hall Knight, one of his backers here.

O. E. Scott, manager of Lambert St. Louis flying field here, was one of those who doubted the current reports concerning Lindbergh.

Knight took occasion, however, to express doubt that Col. Lindbergh has decided to fly to Tokio, Japan, as announced in dispatches from the Japanese capital yesterday.

Scott expressed doubt that Col. Lindbergh would attempt such a flight in the Ryan monoplane now under construction in San Diego, Cal. In the first place, Scott said, the plane is a single motor job and from descriptions of it that have reached St. Louis it is not designed for such strenuous tests as would be demanded by the Pacific flight. The fuel capacity of Lindbergh's new plane is only 500 gallons, it is said, while a far greater fuel capacity will be needed for the suggested flight.

The Kill 'em, Love 'em Complex, Suppressed Desires and Overplayed Emotionalism

In obtaining her "rights," woman lost a throne and her divine right to rule, was one of Dr. Dorsey's statements in The Sun-Telegraph yesterday. He explained that this is one thing the matter with the home today—"Babylon has moved to Main Street." The rise of psychoses and the "off" behavior of most people. However, men love children as much as do women.

Freudism Has Become a Disease

CHAPTER XLVI.

THE emotional side bulges in psychoses: we "adore," we "love," we are "passionately fond of," birds, cats, dogs, bull fights, pink tights, Niagara Falls, Caruso, the night boat to Albany. Some "love" half the world of things and all the world of beings. Others are as devoted to their hates: they have dozens of ways for hating things and people. Extreme and lurid fears are the third of the three emotional Graces. A Grace in disgrace is a psychosis.

GEORGE A. DORSEY

Whole nations get that way. We recently hated all Germany, even "German silver" and Dachshunds; and loved the French, down to snails and frogs' legs. We cheered at the movies when we saw a German killed, applauded when we saw a Frenchman kiss an American officer. The whole "civilized" world suffered a huge psychosis: a kill-'em-love-'em complex.

Freudian psychoses are planted in infancy and are sexual. Freud even went so far as to say that every dream is a "wishfulfiller" and has its feet on the forbidden pleasures of childhood.

The business of the sex-impulse is mating; if the two sexes do not pair, the sex-impulse has not attended to its business and is a biologic failure. Many do not pair, few live happily ever after; the sex-impulse has attended to everything except its own business. Being denied proper outlet, it disarranges society and long ago became the dominant force in human behavior. By the time Freud is through, life is Sex. The drive in life is love, Libido. "Thwarted libido" is responsible for all the trouble.

Something to Kill

That sounded interesting and Freudism became a fad; then a cult, and is now a disease and should be put out of its misery.

Here is the argument. The newborn comes into the world naked and unashamed. The world says: "That's not nice; you must not do that." That begins the Conflict: animal instinct versus social Don'ts. But instinctive "I wants" are not to be laid by "Don'ts." What then? "Substitutes." The young "mind" indulges its instinctive libido by symbols, Society's substitutes for Nature's actions.

For Freud, "mind" is stuff, a product of the processes of development. Certain forces determine the trend of this development. By "psycho-analysis" this "mind" can be examined—as one examines the contents of a jug. Such examination will reveal the manner in which these determining forces have acted and reacted.

But the mind is like a jug with much sediment below the thin skim-milk on top. The sediment is the Unconscious Mind, thick with repressed instinctive impulses and "I want" memories. This stuff is a source of energy, loaded, always smoldering; it exerts influence. It is a hidden drive to action no less than the libido impulse itself.

Do the "repressions" ever rise to Consciousness? Only when disguised or distorted—as they always are in dreams. In dreams they "rise." But we do not know them, they are so distorted, so symbolized. We must have a dream-book—there are such; or we must go to a psycho-analyst—there are such. They can exorcise our big and little devils.

Bad Learning

Science must formulate hypotheses—and proceed to test them. But progress is not made by assuming that spanking a child drives a libido to parts unknown which later will jump up like a Jack-in-the-box to scare the man or woman to death.

No child is a "born liar." But a lively youngster may become a proficient one in 10 or less years, driven to learn the art because parents will be parents and boys will be boys. Every child is taught the meaning of approbation and of contempt and learns the meaning of candy and a hickory switch. But few children learn that disguise, artifice, deception and falsehood have no value in "getting along" with the family. The child does learn that simulation does pay. If forced, it becomes adept in such behavior. Simulation becomes an intrinsic part of its adjustment repertoire. The boss, the bully, the tease, the flirt, as well as the exhibitionist, are also specialized products of vicious home or early school training.

The instinct of self-preservation may find a perverted outlet in the impulse to be cruel to others. If continued, it makes for frightfulness, atrocities, prize-fights, cruelty for the sheer love of being cruel, including cruelty to one's own children.

The sex-complex is complex in man and in all species of animals with sexual reproduction. In human society it has become increasingly complex. It is so individualized that there are as many kinds of sex behavior as there are individuals. So many things in life are "loved" that sentimentality is more common than sensuality. The inherent emotional drive to seek and love a mate goes out to dogs and sunsets, and bathes with tears the belongings of the late beloved.

Frank or Mystic

There are habits, types of behavior; they vary with age and clime. These habits function in individuals. The sex behavior of any individual is only to be understood in the light of the manner in which the individual learned to respond to the two-sex world in which he or she grew up.

To say that man is driven by sex is to say that man is a mammal or that human reproduction is sexual. To say that a repressed libido is also a drive, but hides in the Unconscious—to pop out in a bad dream or a psychosis—is the mystic's way of saying that life learns, and that reflex arcs and salivary and color glands can be and are conditioned. To say—with Freud and Jung—that the mythology and symbolism of human culture have their roots in the Unconscious, is to make a magician's cave where by psycho-analysis one can discover anything one puts into it.

"Libido" sounds more potent than love; "Unconscious" more mysterious than behavior. That is why Libido was so popular; why so many started to juggle with Unconscious.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

BY HAVEY J. BOYLE

PITTSBURGH bookworms went in heavily for a book called: "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." It has been a best seller since last November. It is considered one of the best-written books in years. One of the "pleasant" little things the author portrays is a daughter's mom affection for a doting mother.

Incidentally, since mention of a book in French on the best ways to commit suicide brought a host of inquiries, including one from an Ohio man who wanted to send it to his mother-in-law (he said), it may be of some interest to know that a professor has studied what causes people to commit suicide. He comes to the startling conclusion that they are tired of living, which sounds platitudinous, until one delves into the more interesting nuances of his observations.

We've always had an amateurish hunch that closing the garage doors and letting the engine run would be about as good a way as any, although why anyone should want to make this sort of a blind trade always has been a mystery here.

SUICIDE, if we may go further on the theme, always seems more probable in juvenile days than in adult years, although the statistics likely will confute this. Yet there must be any number of men, who, looking back on the time when a very cruel parent decreed: "No supper and to bed," can remember the time when they went to bed and just to get back at the mean old parent decided to stop breathing and see what happened. What always happened, of course, was that after a short stretch the boy, getting short of wind, took a very deep breath and decided to postpone the obsequies until a later date.

WHAT prompted the postponement of rigor mortis, aside from the discomfort of non-breathing, was a pretty vivid picture of what happened to little boys who purposely up and died. Experiments with lighted matches to small fingers to prove the quality of the blaze and the discomfort attendant upon it in the lower regions somehow helped to make the little boy turn over and cry himself to sleep.

Those were the days when small ears with some horror drank in every word about the enthusiastic firemen who work under the leadership of Beelzebub and Company. Nearly always, the boys in the bath room who inadvertently sat on the hot stove while drying their ankles, decided to lead a better life if that burn was a criterion of what awaited the miscreant in the next world.

Those horrors always seemed more awful at night. Somehow with the dawn and daylight a burn was just a burn.

THERE is probably some psychological connection with this inconsequent dissertation of those twins, sleep and death, and a pleasant meeting the other day with Mr. William A. Hamor, assistant director of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh. This, because we had asked him about certain experiments about sleeping which were conducted and later given some publication. Mr. Hamor promised to let us visit him and find out a little of what is going on at that most interesting institution.

THE subject of sleep interests here because it seems that in this matter nature was just a little haphazard. Thus, it is a well-known and disconcerting fact that elderly men get along with much less sleep than young men when to scrutinize the proposition it seems it ought to be the other way around.

Into the discussion came also the subject of dreams which it develops have a pathological basis for their seeming existence.

What we would like to find out in this connection is why after a harmless sandwich late at night we always dream that a crowd is chasing us down Fifth avenue in broad daylight and that we are attired only in our underwear and a stovepipe hat.

JERRY The Epic of a Girl Who Had to Wait. by Elenore Meherin

Letters From Home and Jerry Longs to Fly Back to Saxon

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good looking, charming and nineteen, falls in love with Saxon Rhodes, a young architect. Marza, her fascinating mother, warns her that idealists like Saxon make poor husbands. When he goes abroad to study, Jerry promises to wait for him. She refuses a proposal of marriage from Heinie Ross. Jerry agrees to wait three years longer. She wonders whether Saxon loves her as completely as she loves him. Saxon calls on his sister who warns him against marrying anyone and facing poverty. Saxon's attention to Ora Pringle gives Jerry a pang of jealousy. They attend a week end party where things start to happen. She decides to give Saxon up. She meets her mother and discovers that Marza has another daughter of whose existence her husband had been ignorant. Marza tells Jerry that this sister of hers is dying and needs them both.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"YOU love her? Jerry—tell me, shall you be able to accept her—freely—gaily . . ."

"I like her—love her. But all these years she has known you as her mother. And thought of herself as your only child. It is going to be a fearful blow now to find me a rival and to see me acknowledged as your child while she is denied. This will have to happen if we take her home . . ."

Marza's hand pausing: "We could all go to some strange city. I've thought of this. The three of us—"

"We haven't money enough. You'd have to sell the apartment. You'd have to give up everything. It would be awfully destitute—making new friends—cutting loose from everything. . . ."

She broke off because she felt weak. She went over and smoothed powder on her nose. Cut loose from everything—

Go to some strange new city and begin again.

But for her there would be no new beginning. Her heart was anchored in the past—in him.

And in her pocket was a letter from Inga—a withering, desolate letter.

She longed to be home—fly home. If they stayed here much longer it would be too late. And everything would be ended . . . utterly.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

SHE was bewildered by this sudden, intense criss-crossing of other lives on her life. Stephanie's—her mother's—

Go away to some strange new city and all begin again! Go away—give him up utterly!

She took a hot, weighted breath and walked more rapidly. Late afternoon, the end of September. Trees along the lake all red and brown. Leaves falling. Autumn and melancholy.

"Go away? What if I did? Lost anyway. It's all lost anyway."

She closed her fingers over Inga's letter and gazed resolutely at a boat resisting the wind.

He was free of her. Had taken his freedom.

Inga told of a house-party at Pebble Beach. The Hopkins had opened their new place; the place Saxon built.

"It's perfectly stunning. You saw the plans. But you've no idea how magnificiently it sets in with the trees and the hills. They're just wild about it and are lauding Saxon to the skies. You can't blame the lad if he gets his head slightly turned. Anyway, he's going big with the filthy rich, so his future is made.

"The Pennings are to have him build an English manor house. Hereby hangs romance. Perhaps he's told you—that is, if you're letting him write. I think, ole dear, he's missing you most awfully.

He came up for dinner the night. Sylvia and John cooked a Saxon and I had to wash dishes as Sylvia won't let them near the sink. She's afraid of antagonizing Saxon. He takes up each morning to see how he's painting Diablo. This is a most hideous crow's nest you and Saxon have found for yourselves. Saxon's got our lamps on the mantel in the apartment and are making it look pleasant for the Turners so that they'll move out and we'll move in. We've figured it out and can save the rent. So you and Marza will have us cavorting above you. Saxon says she can paint a masterpiece from that lookout.

"Do write to get back to Saxon. He's talked and talked of you. Asked me if I thought you went away to get rid of him. So I think he's still yours, though he's having a dizzy time with the women.

"That's the way with these hard-working, virtuous young males who don't have a chance to sow wild oats when they should. Twenty-six to thirty is the dangerous age for them. Lord, how these belated adolescents DO step!

"And the gay, hectic time he's having. This harks me back to the Pennings and the daughter of the family, Mary Eunice Pennings Bothwell. I don't think you know her. Rather striking with a sylph-like figure and eyes somewhat like yours. Plenty of conceit, which as you know passes as S. A. with the dumb male.

"Mary Eunice gets her final divorce and her maiden name by the end of the week. Believe me she'll give Ora Pringle a run for her money, judging by the hotsy-totsy evidence at the house-party. She and Saxon danced every number together. And the way she intrigued him! There ought to be a law against this unjust competition of gay divorcees. If chastity is to remain on the face of the earth, though I've always had my doubts about its worth! Certainly it ain't the weapon that wins the wedding-ring today!

"Mary Eunice is conferring with him daily about plans for the manor house and no one knows what else! They were at Tait's Saturday. I saw one long sweet one that he gave her or she gave him. Anyway he seems highly pleased with himself—a little surprised and very exultant with his triumphs."

Jerry watched the little boat resisting the wind. She felt like that—buffeted.

He was taking her at her word. "Ah—be as free and as gay as you please while I'm gone! You have the world's room. Take it!"

What treacherous cruelty had led her to the saying of it? She was mad—utterly mad. She should have held on. Ora Pringle would, Mary Pennings would!

She should go back. Fly back—

What good? What good? There crept into her thought, making it utterly bleak, the consciousness of futility; of her utter, abject defenselessness.

She could not hold him. The pull against her was too strong. All summer she had felt it.

Hold on? Yes—for more quarrels, more surface reconciliations. Better this way—better ended—

The desolate thing was that she could not accept it; could not kill the young, surging hope. Hide it—yes. But she had gone away loving him—and she would go on loving him and waiting for a return of his ardor. Waiting for the miracle. Inwardly, infallibly certain that it must happen. She would not lose this love. She could not!

In the middle of October she received a letter from him that deepened, if possible, her wound.

There was this paragraph: "Things are breaking wonderfully for me. I've several big jobs under way and several more in sight. Jerry, I wonder, a great deal, what motives you had in insisting on our parting. Were you growing uncertain of your feeling? You deny this. But I wonder. We were both pretty young when we first met and neither of us had ever cared for anyone else. I've an idea that you figured we'd both be better off if we took a fling at others before entering the dubious state of matrimony. I'm beginning to think you were awfully wise."

Wise! Fling her heart to desolation and him to Ora Pringle or Mary Eunice Pennings!

It wouldn't do any good to go home now—no good.

Yet the more she recognized this the more impatient and restless she became. Until now she was burning with it. Almost sick with despair.

If she could but see him for one hour! She thought this sometimes as she dressed. As she looked at her image in the mirror. Then her cheeks would turn crimson and her eyes flame. If she could have just one hour she would win him again!

The prospect then of going to some new place—of cutting ruthlessly free became insane—unthinkable. The confession to herself that she had lost.

She would sometimes vision this new, destitute life she and Marza and Marza's Stephanie would have. Quite poor—friendless—menial. No bright, singing contacts—no flash and color.

Subdued—chill—loveless. She would repeat this last word until her heart blazed. Loveless—a defrauded woman growing thin and righteous with the years.

"No! Not that! I'll never drift to that!"

At 23 no one thinks so.

Marza was aware of her storm. One night she sat a long while pretending to read.

Suddenly: "Stephanie can be moved in four weeks. The doctor told me today."

"Can she walk?"

"There will have to be another operation. But that must wait till the spring."

"Where can she be moved?"

"Wherever we are to live."

"Where is that to be, Mother?"

Marza flicked ashes from her cigaret: "Where do you want to be, Jerry?"

"Why put it up to me?" Then hushed—reluctant—"You've not told her yet? She will have a right to say."

Marza turned the pages of her book. "I can't undo the wrong to Stephanie now. But I can make her way easy. Perhaps I would best do this by asking her and you to a new place. But this would uproot your life."

"Yes," thought Jerry stilly, "and yours too!"

"But that is the only way," Marza went on in a subdued, half-pleading way. "That I can acknowledge you both. It will be terrible to Stephanie to be denied. I know this!"

"She has one compensation."

"What compensation?"

"The memories she has of her father and the knowledge that you loved so greatly. There would be this beauty—this inner conviction that she is really better born than I—far better born than I. And that in your heart, Marza, you must look back with more joy to her coming than you did to mine."

"Ah, no! When the choice was forced I couldn't forsake you even for the two of them. And I loved Stephanie as God alone can measure it. But you, Jerry, came to me in a loneliness—an answer to a pitiable need. I never counted that you belonged to your father but to me alone. All the while you were coming I poured out the love of lives on you. We were two against a bitter, loveless world. You are woven of my soul."

"But she is woven of your great love! . . ."

"Will that compensate a girl 19—just 19?"

Madge, Puzzled by the Great Producer's Attitude, Yet Gives Noel a Chance

I WOULD have given much for the power to read Philip Veritzen's inscrutable face and find out the real reason for the resentment which I was sure he felt at the spectacle of his son and young Mr. Jackson paying assiduous and rival court to Mary Harrison. I already had decided that it had nothing to do with his well-known rule that his dramatic proteges must eschew all romantic entanglements. But I had no clue to the more personal reason which I was sure animated him, and as a result I felt baffled and distinctly uneasy on Mary's account.

I guessed that he only had been waiting a favorable opportunity to break up the grouping which so obviously irritated him, and Miss Lincoln's announcement of her wish to go home gave him a chance of which he made immediate use. Waiting only for the usual protests and exchange of perfunctory talk between a hostess and a departing guest, he made his own announcement of departure.

"Miss Lincoln, I am grateful to you," he declared with the touch of flamboyance which is almost always faintly discernible in his manner. "For half an hour I have known that it was time to leave, but I have not had the courage to cut short my own enjoyment of one of the pleasantest evenings I ever have spent. Now you have shown me the way, I also shall be brave. Mrs. Graham, I am desolated, but I really must go."

From behind his unconscious back Lillian sent me a mischievous, comprehending glance which nearly made me spoil my vaguely polite protests with a grin. For it mirthfully pointed out what I already had noted with amusement, that with eyes and voice he had managed to convey to Eleanor Lincoln the impression that the evening was over for him as soon as she should have gone. And his manner to me had just as strongly stressed the idea that I alone was responsible for his enjoyment of the hospitality upon which he was pronouncing such lavish encomiums.

"I told Otto to go to the hotel, unpack for me and wait until I sent for him," he went on. "May I have the use of your telephone, or—Noel—perhaps you will save your aged sire a few steps?"

It was a clever ruse, but to me a most obvious one, and I wondered if the sight of Noel's disappointed eyes gave him any sardonic amusement, as the youth dutifully and with apparent alacrity moved toward the hall to obey his father's suggestion. Suddenly I felt a fierce little wave of resentment against my employer. All the evening Noel had been tormented by the proximity and aggressive attentions to Mary of young Mr. Jackson. And now, just as the young and altogether too fascinating stranger was about to take his enforced departure as Miss Lincoln's escort, I knew that Noel had counted upon a few uninterrupted minutes with the lady of his heart, a vision which his father had spoiled.

With a sudden Puckish impulse I turned to Mary in apparently worried recollection of something amiss.

"Oh! Mary, dear," I said as Noel went through the door leading from the veranda to the house, "I am afraid I left the local telephone book upstairs. Would you mind seeing whether I did or not, and if it is missing, will you get it for Noel?"

She agreed, of course, but her face reflected no great enthusiasm at her errand, and a furtive glance at the faces surrounding me told me that I had displeased Mr. Veritzen and caused resentment in the breasts of young Mr. Jackson, of Eleanor Lincoln and of Mary herself, who was patently enjoying the heady draught of admiration which young Mr. Jackson had been brewing for her all the evening. But my sympathies had long been enlisted upon Noel's side, and I was resolved that the boy should have his chance for a few words with Mary unheard by other ears.

Tomorrow

By LUCY LOWELL

TOO many of us are living in some vague, misty future day, meanwhile letting the real, glowing present slip away.

We keep talking of tomorrow and tomorrow, planning, anticipating, looking ahead. All the time forgetting that tomorrow never comes.

It is always today. This day, this hour, the minute just now ticking its way into infinity is all we ever have.

The kindly action you have thought of performing some time to come when it was convenient for you—the word of love you planned to speak—the nobleness you have waited to take unto yourself on some tomorrow—why not do those things now, and be sure of them?

"Tomorrow? Why, tomorrow I may be Myself with yesterday's seven thousand years!"

Thus wrote Omar. And he wrote of the one thing absolutely sure.

Robert Ingersoll expressed it this way:

"Reason, Observation, Experience—the Holy Trinity of Science—have taught us that happiness is the only good; that the time to be happy is now, and the way to be happy is to make others so."

Yes—the time to be happy is now—today. Not tomorrow, which we may never see.

Sunday, April 1

Upon the just law of sowing and reaping, action and reaction, astrology is based.—ALAN LEO.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds portent of sinister and unexpected events that may be disquieting and harrowing in force. Calm and cool action under all circumstances is admonished.

Those whose birthday it is should equip themselves for a year of the unusual, irregular and furtive. They should school themselves in calm and deliberate actions in any sort of visitation. Impulsive and passionate conduct would prove mischievous.

A child born on this day may have a tendency to impulse and tumult which would work to its disaster unless it be trained and disciplined in calmness and control in early infancy.

Notable Nativity: Edwin Austin Abbey, painter.

Monday, April 2

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of possible depression and suspicion, especially as it relates to personal matters. In business there may be new deals and contracts or agreements, involving letters and signatures, but these should be attended to with extreme caution.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of depression and indecision in personal affiliations, but in business new arrangements call for discretion and caution in all writings and agreements.

A child born on this day may have a tendency to be morose, sullen and suspicious in its personal contacts and not altogether reliable in business unless given early discipline and training.

Notable Nativity: Mary Miles Minter, movie star.

Musterole is easy to apply and works right away. It may prevent a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts.

A Personal Word to the Public

IN CLOSING, today, the Palmer Silk Shop, as a result of a dissolution of partnership, after six years of successful business in the Jenkins Arcade, I desire to take the occasion to express my sincere thanks to my friends and the public at large for their patronage.

The response which has attended my closing-out sale, enabling me to dispose of a more than $100,000 stock, in less than a month, has been most gratifying, as an indication of public recognition of Palmer qualities and values.

I have been engaged as Buyer and Manager for the Silk and Wool Goods Departments of Pittsburgh's oldest and most reliable store, where with the increased facilities and world-wide resources of this larger store, I will have greater opportunity for serving the public. The salespeople of my present store will go with me.

I hope to have the continued patronage of my friends and customers in my new connection, which will be announced shortly.

Stocks Show They Can Fall Comptroller Warns Banks

—By B. C. FORBES—

WELL, the stock market is beginning to demonstrate that it can go down as well as up. Having already gone up so far, the logical thing is to expect it to go down.

It is inconceivable that long-headed, wealthy investors should be accumulating stocks at recent or current prices. Such investors don't clamor to buy when others rush in and force quotations to unprecedented heights. That is when the forward-looking investor sells.

Certainly developments in the business world have not justified climbing for stocks at fantastic advances in price. The boom has been confined to stocks. Neither business nor agriculture has shared it. Nothing having occurred to make stocks worth far more money, shrewd investors, you can rest assured, are not feverishly buying at dizzy quotations.

COL. MACINTOSH, Comptroller of the Currency, while in New York this week, was asked by the writer, "What is the principal thing on your mind in regard to the banking situation in America?"

"The paying of unreasonable rates of interest on deposits by many banks," he promptly replied. "Competition for business has been responsible for this unfortunate development. It has been making it extremely hard—often impossible—for many banks, particularly smaller institutions, to make reasonable profits."

The comptroller, very wisely, has been discouraging the indiscriminate launching of very small banks throughout the country. The time has passed when $25,000 was adequate for starting a national bank. This fact has been driven home during recent years; failures among the smallest institutions were deplorably numerous.

Questioned regarding bank failures during recent months, the comptroller was able to reply that failures last year were fewer than in the previous year and that the record so far this year has shown still greater improvement.

THIS column has been emphasizing the many changes among railway and industrial presidents. The Bankers Trust Company, New York, yesterday celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is interesting to note the positions then occupied, compared with the positions now occupied, by some of those identified with its establishment.

Henry P. Davison, who conceived and founded what was to prove one of the highest-grade and most successful financial institutions in America, passed away years ago. His place as the foremost partner in J. P. Morgan & Co. is now filled by Thomas W. Lamont, who was the original secretary and treasurer.

Albert H. Wiggin, now head of the billion-dollar Chase Bank, was then vice president of the National Park Bank. William H. Porter, now a member of the Morgan firm, was president of the Chemical National Bank. Gates W. McGarrah, for years head of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, and now federal reserve agent at New York, was then president of the Leather Manufacturers Bank. A. Barton Hepburn, who became president of the Chase, was then vice president.

The rise of Bankers Trust to sixth place among the financial institutions of America has been due mainly to two men, first, Mr. Davison, and, during the last 14 years, Seward Prosser, who not so long ago stepped from the presidency to the chairmanship and installed as his successor in the presidency A. A. Tilney.

Never once during its quarter-century history has the Bankers Trust been connected in the slightest degree with anything savoring of questionable banking. It has been a shining example to other banks and bankers. It is one of several notable monuments left by Henry P. Davison, probably the brainiest banker New York has known in a generation.

GOODRICH was the only tire company able last year to show an increase in sales. It also showed a much higher percentage in net profit—132 per cent—than any other of the five largest companies.

Those who know well J. D. Tew, the newly-elected president, declare confidently that Goodrich will show still more notable progress under his vigorous direction. The presidency of a gigantic rubber company has not been a bed of roses during recent years.

Incidentally, the General Tire Company has been outdistancing all others in percentage increase in sales and net profits—its profits last year rose 256 per cent.

SOME busy business men always seem to find time for worthy, public-spirited duties. New York has really a gratifying number. Among them is James Speyer, international banker. His latest undertaking is the raising of $2,000,000 to establish the museum of the City of New York. The city has assigned a Fifth avenue site for an imposing new building, provided the trustees raise $2,000,000 by June 1.

We are told often that New York has been developing a creditable civic spirit. Here is an ideal opportunity to prove it!

WALL STREET has been so busy with the stock market that politics have been largely ignored. But be prepared for at least one spasm of apprehension over politics before very long.

WEST. ELECTRIC SKY-ROCKETS

Stocks were in active demand during the abbreviated session of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, with the trading showing more spirit than on any previous day of the week.

Lone Star Gas opened the market with a moderate flurry, but after making a fractional gain on the initial movement, quieted down and held around the level prevailing on the close yesterday. A slightly improved condition in the general oil industry and the recent announcements of rights to purchase new stock at par ($25) were factors influencing the movement in the shares. There was little activity in the other fuel issues.

Westinghouse Electric enjoyed a wide advance in the New York market, but the upswing was not reflected in the local dealings. Neither was there any market in Westinghouse Air Brake here, although that stock was firm in New York in sympathy with Electric. Outlook for the electric companies is very rosy for the long pull and it is likely that big business for these concerns will continue for several years.

Miscellaneous manufacturing issues were firm to strong. United Engineering which has been pointing upward recently made a further gain today, but not much of the stock seems to be available around current levels. Carnegie Metals also showed more activity than it had for the past few days, but failed to make any material headway. Interest in the issue was stimulated by the recent strength in the metal and mining stocks in the New York market.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Pierce, Butler Passes Dividend.

The Pierce, Butler & Pierce Manufacturing Corporation has omitted quarterly dividends of 50 cents on the new common and $2 on the old common stock, due at this time.

Loss for White Motor.

White Motor Company reports for the year 1927 net loss of $490,341 after all charges, as against net income of $2,044,291 in 1926.

Famous Players.

Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation consolidated net income was $6,027,997 for the year 1927, after Federal taxes, etc., equal, after preferred dividends, to $12.45 a share on 379,527 average common turned, against $5,460,515, of $10.82 a share, on 452,026 average shares in 1926.

Nickel Plate Net Up.

February net operating income of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis (Nickel Plate) increased $124,899 over February last year, to $445,443 and for the first two months this year gained $279,196 over a year ago, a total of $1,027,414. February surplus of the St. Louis-Southwestern rose to $179,483 from $14,575 a year ago.

Rock Island Gains.

February surplus of the Rock Island lines rose to $717,077 from $554,674 a year ago, and for the two months of 1928 $1,623,244 from $429,324 in the same period of 1927.

Woolworth Sales Prospects.

First quarter sales of F. W. Woolworth Company are expected to establish a record of $16,500,000, surpassing the previous record for the first quarter last year by $2,700,000. The company has 197 new locations under lease for opening this year.

Trade Conditions Spotty.

Bradstreet's trade report says: "Trade and industrial reports are rather more spotted. Wholesale and jobbing trade reports are of business being fair and about equal to a year ago, with buying cautious, and hand-to-mouth purchasing still the feature. Retail trade, affected by bad roads, cold weather, rains or snows in different areas, tends to lag, and Easter buying advances rather slowly. There is evidence, in fact, that what was expected to be an early spring season in both trade and agriculture has not eventuated. The usual reduction of closed season unemployment has therefore not progressed as rapidly as earlier expected, and official characterization of unemployment, as a whole, is that it is serious. Industry varies with the lines reporting, automobile production being active, with more men employed than a year ago at most leading centers, while steel buying is of fair to good volume, and 80 to 90 per cent of capacity being at work. Weekly bank clearings were $11,343,744,000, an increase of 23.2 per cent over a year ago."

Copper Stocks Favored.

Hornblower & Weeks say: "Copper buying in the last 10 days has been the most active for any similar period in several years. For the first time in several years, copper producers have been able to hold the price long enough during a period of small buying to force the domestic consumers into the market at producers' prices. We would buy copper stocks and particularly Anaconda as a probable leader of this group during further copper strength, which we think will be witnessed in the immediate future."

Crown-Zellerbach Paper.

Consolidation of the Zellerbach Corporation and Crown Willamette Paper Company into a new company, to be known as the Crown-Zellerbach Corporation, with assets approximating $100,000,000, will be submitted to stockholders of both companies in the near future. Zellerbach Corporation is already a holding company for a number of operating subsidiaries.

Richfield Head Optimistic.

The outlook for the oil industry as a whole and in California in particular, is especially promising, due to the co-operative programs that have been worked out during the last year and which unquestionably will be continued this year, according to James A. Talbot, president of the Richfield Oil Corporation of California. "The '927' price slump, due to excessive and wasteful over-production, established lower levels than the industry has experienced since pre-war days. Not only for crude oil, but for all grades of fuel and refined products. It is with a feeling of increased security and optimism that we welcome the creation of governmental agencies to assist in solving the problems that will eliminate waste in operation and development, conserve our vital petroleum resources and build new confidence in the entire structure. The recent work of the Federal Oil Conservation Board, the American Petroleum Institute and, in California, of the government's conservation committee, will not only bring about the desired conservation of petroleum reserves, but will assist the leaders of the industry to save for its stockholders and the public vast sums of money."

American Machine and Foundry.

American Machine and Foundry Company earned $7.18 a share on 1,000,000 shares in 1927, after preferred dividends, against $3.83 a share in 1926. Net profit rose to $1,418,979 from $734,646 in 1926.

Inspiration's Net Down.

Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company reports for the year 1927 net income of $729,694, equal to 62 cents a share, against $1.11 in 1926.

Refunding American Gas Bonds.

American Gas and Electric Company has called for redemption on May 1, 1928, all of its 6 per cent gold debenture bonds, American series, due May 1, 2014, at 110 and accrued interest. There are $46,594,000 of the debentures outstanding. According to current reports, the issue will be refunded by issuance of $50,000,000 5 per cent debentures, which are expected to be offered shortly at 101.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving remembrance of my dear mother, Mrs. Louisa Beck, who died five years ago today, March 31, 1923.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our hearts
Which never can be filled.

Sadly missed by her children and grandchildren.

In loving memory of my husband, Charles D. Carroll, who died one year ago today, March 31, 1927.

Surrounded by friends I am lonesome,
In the midst of my pleasure I'm blue;
A smile on my face still a heartache,
Longing and grieving for you.

Sadly missed by his wife and son, Mrs. Louise Carroll and Elmer.

Mr. Frisby Announces Scientific Discovery

Wholeyobe Doakes, eminent scientist, who has not denied Frisby theory.

WASHINGTON — Congressman Frisby today hurled a defy that shook the very foundations of modern geography.

Arising on a matter of personal privilege, Congressman Frisby read his 40,000-word paper advancing the theory that the world is flat instead of round. He also branded the theory that the world revolves as "stuff and nonsense."

Frisby's declaration was interpreted to be a strong bid for the Zion City vote.

"I base my contention," declared the Congressman at Large, "on the following experiment:

"I took an ordinary field plow and stuck its nose in the ground.

"The next morning, and for several days subsequent, I made notes and observations. The plow remained just as I left it.

"Now if the world is round and revolves, it is obvious that the earth's motion, against the plowshare, would have automatically have cut a furrow around the globe.

"No such thing happened. Consequently it is plain to any thinking person that the world is flat and, I might add, stationary."

BUGS BAER Says

LINDBERGH made new records for flying with passengers in Washington last week.

Most of his clients were Congressmen. The Senators were too busy to get away as a Senator is only elected for a two-year investigation.

However, Lindy did fly three prominent officials and established another record by coming down without any Liberty bonds.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

When Lindy had those guys up in the air we realized that he had made his flight to Europe a year too soon.

We know that Sinclair would like to get Borah up about sixty-seven miles in the air and holler, "Kiss or jump."

The indoor aviating is very good in politics this season. Many a parachute has failed to open between the swivel chair and the waste basket.

The boys who flew with Lindy started in Washington and landed in the same spot. It didn't do them a bit of good.

Some of them enjoyed it. Others did not.

For no worm can appreciate a bird's eye view of an apple when he would rather be down there biting it.

Jobless Men May Make A Democratic Victory

Of course, the country is temporarily shocked by the oil on the Republican toga. Nevertheless, that is not the source of the chief peril threatening the party next November.

The Republicans may win even in the face of the scandal. They will lose if unemployment develops throughout the country in 1928.

The Sinclair-Doheny-Fall oil scandal was already known when the 1924 presidential and congressional elections came around. The Democrats made the most of these exposures. Nevertheless, there was a Republican landslide at the polls, electing Coolidge and giving a Republican majority of 22 in the Senate and 168 in the House.

The reason is that the country was prosperous, the people fully employed. Under such conditions, the voters are unlikely to bother much about the morality of the party in power. But when business falls off, they punish the party in control.

The depression of 1921-22 lay heavy on the land when men and women went to vote in the congressional elections of 1922. When it was over, the Grand Old Party found it had lost nine Senators and seventy-five Congressmen.

Today, Republican control of Congress is precarious. They have 48 Senators, the Democrats 47, and there is one Farmer-Laborite. The Republicans have a majority of 42 in the House. That is, a loss of one Senator, and 22 Congressmen would put the Democrats in power. And with defeat in Congress might go defeat in the presidency.

Not oil, but prosperity and employment will be the campaign issues this year.

The Republicans still control Congress. They can increase employment in the most productive way by expenditures on great public works like Boulder Dam, Mississippi flood protection, Columbia Basin irrigation project, St. Lawrence-to-the-Sea waterway.

They can, and should, appropriate liberally for naval construction, for rounding out the Shipping Board fleet, and for generous construction loans to private shipping concerns.

Generally speaking, the great industries of the country are in the hands of men whose politics is distinctly Republican. Their business policies this spring and summer will have a very great influence on the employment figures.

Likewise, Republican are the big financial interests which control the supply of industrial and commercial credit. They can have a lot to say as to whether 1928 will be prosperous.

The typewriter salesman, demonstrating his machine, used to write: "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." Now IS the time.

Penny Wise; Pound Foolish

Economy is the only source of opposition to the Porter bill for constructing two Federal prison farms to take care of the two thousand dope addicts now in Federal prisons.

The Federal Government last year had a surplus revenue of over six hundred million dollars. We are not too poor to care for the pitiful, diseased derelicts that now make up a third of our prison population.

Probably half of them can be cured. If not cured, their discharge means re-entry to crime to get the funds for satisfying the craving for an expensive drug.

Purely as a matter of economy, if a thousand addicts could be turned out of these institutions each year completely cured and able to live normally, the Federal Government would save large sums in the cost of apprehending and convicting addicts. Many authorities say it costs $3,000 to catch and convict an offender.

Humanity and economy alike plead for the prison farms provided in the Porter bill. The facts will be brought out in the pending hearings before the House Judiciary Committee, and the bill should then move promptly forward to passage.

End This Injustice

Without a record vote the Senate has passed the Tyson bill, extending to disabled emergency officers of the World War the same retirement privileges now accorded to disabled officers of the regular establishment.

A companion measure, known as the Fitzgerald bill, is still pending in the House, favorably reported by the House Veterans' Committee.

There are three thousand of these ex-emergency officers, rated at 30 per cent or more permanent disability. Today they get a small disability allowance. The Tyson-Fitzgerald bill will allow them to retire on three-quarters of their war-time pay and live in decent comfort the rest of their lives.

There will not be a handful of votes in the House against the measure. The House Rules Committee should give it a prompt place on the calendar and end the 10-year-long injustice done to this class of our country's defenders.

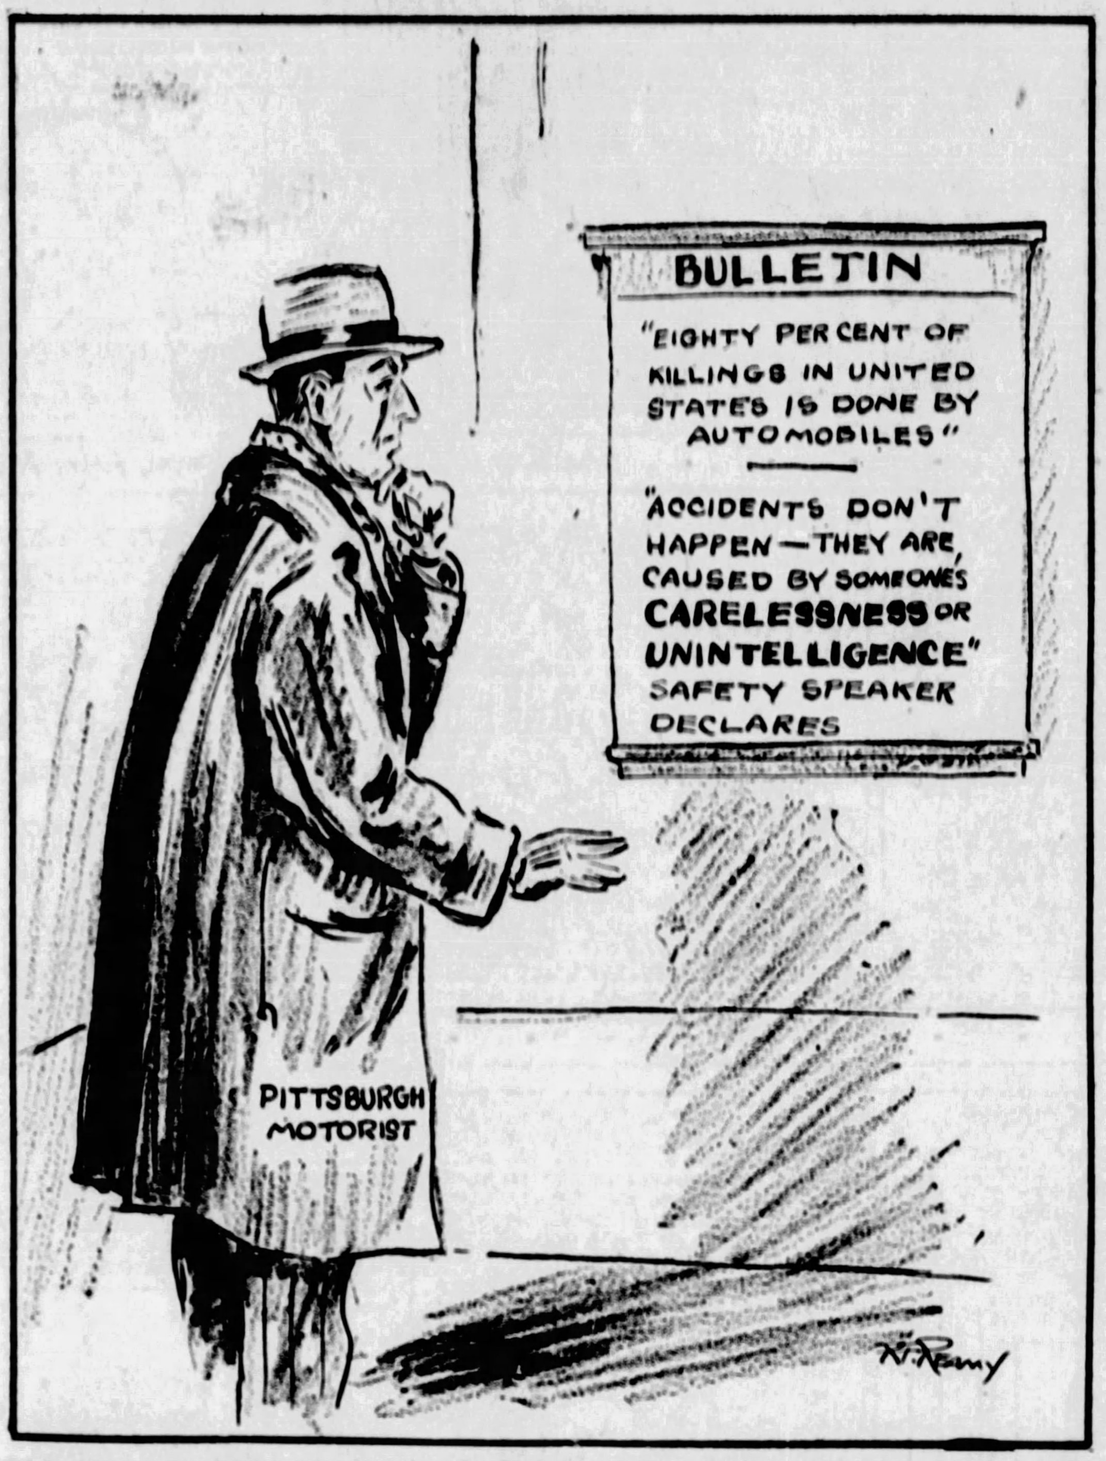
Jim Reed Talks to Farmers
They Understand Him

Senator Reed, of Missouri, a first-class fighting man who would be a good Democratic candidate for the presidency, told the people of Tulsa, Oklahoma—and all the farmers of the country—that "if the farmer could buy on the same price level upon which he must sell he would have an even chance in the race of life."

Farmers understand that kind of talk. They know what Senator Reed means. The Senator, always definite, explained that Eastern manufacturers put money into campaign fights and insist on a high tariff for protection. That means high prices for almost everything the farmer must purchase with the proceeds of his crops, and while high prices can be paid by high-wage-earners they can't be paid by farmers—who are more important economically than they are numerically.

Jim Reed, traveling around the country with one suitcase and an old gray campaign hat, interests the PLAIN farmer who knows what he needs.

Something for Him to Remember



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Thoughts and Behavior

"Behaviorism reveals 'mind' as only a product of stimuli in one's environment. But if influences create 'mind' in action or life they should do so in inaction or death, since the entire thought process is supposedly dependent upon mere physical reactions to objects in nature. Yet, in the latter case, they fail, although all physical parts are still present, often unimpaired, but like a camera without a film, nothing is present to record impressions. Doesn't this demonstrate that 'mind' and life are identical, and that 'mind' is not entirely a result of impressions?—George H. Westerhecke."

IT DEMONSTRATES that mind and life are coincident but not that they are necessarily identical. The extreme "behaviorist" philosophers got into their position by approaching it from the side of the lower animals. They studied first the behavior of caterpillars, ants, bees, birds, dogs, horses, etc., and they became convinced that all that these creatures do can be explained by the influence of physical stimuli acting upon the living organisms, and not calling for the operation of something super-physical, ordinarily called mind. Then, carrying the experiments and the argument up to the level of human beings, they "were easily beguiled into explaining away mind altogether."

A rock in their path was the doctrine of consciousness, or the state of awareness to what is going on both within and around the personality. So they began to deny that there is any such thing as consciousness. In fancied imitation of Hannibal dissolving the obstruction rock on the Alps with vinegar, they poured a new form of skepticism upon the citadel of human beliefs, by affirming that "belief is only a habit and not a mental occurrence," or otherwise put, that it is "merely a characteristic of bodily behavior."

"States of mind," they demurred; "but there are no such things, or at least nothing of the kind that can be known. It is the use of words," they went on, "and the efficacy of words in producing conditional responses, that constitutes what you call thinking."

Of course they could not exempt their own thinking from that emasculating definition. Yet they regarded it as both scientific and philosophical just the same! Science and philosophy built on pseudo-thought!

Then came "psychoanalysis," getting down, as its votaries think, "below the level of the waking consciousness," and tending to concentrate attention upon brute feeling as the source of conduct.

The extent to which behaviorist theory has been carried may be illustrated by the application of the term "laryngeal behavior" to language. It is not your mind as you unlearnedly suppose that chooses your words as expressions of your thoughts, for you have neither mind nor thoughts, in the sense you suppose, but it is your larynx that does it through the speech habits that it has acquired by the influence of environing stimuli.

Truly, as some one has said, behaviorism may be considered as "a subtle recrudescence of materialism." It is certainly a curious phenomenon to see man, after having reached the highest mental development of all the millenniums of his existence—at least such we flatter ourselves is the situation—now devoting his trained faculties to efforts to prove that after all he is essentially nothing but a mechanism, responding to physical touches like a piano, or an automaton possessing no original power of his own and no initiative, so that his piled up philosophy and science are after all no more fruitful or generative than heaps of sand.

Youth to the Fore

"THE youngsters have it" will always be the motto in sport. Nevertheless there are outstanding exceptions.

Perhaps the strongest baseball outfielder this year is working for the Philadelphia Athletics, and includes Ty Cobb, who has been playing big league baseball for twenty-four years, and Tris Speaker, who is beginning his twenty-second big league season.

Charlie Paddock, "the fastest human," has been breaking records for seven years, and is still the best sprinter the country has to send to the Olympics.

Bill Tilden, thirty-five years old, is still head and shoulders above any tennis player in the land.

Youth is a matter of stamina, speed, keenness of eye and quick muscular response. If you retain them, you are still young, no matter what your years say.

Add Up the Faults

BECAUSE you know that you have some good qualities do you forgive yourself for many of the faults you possess?

You feel that you strike a fair average, so you are satisfied.

Some things you do, you know are more or less harmful to yourself.

Some things are not just right.

You can find an excuse for yourself, but you are not so liberal when it comes to analyzing other people.

If you were as lenient with others as you are with yourself, you would not find much fault with people in general.

People average up about the same so far as favorable or unfavorable natural inclinations are concerned.

Most of us have plenty of faults.

But those traits which seem trivial in your own case look pretty bad when you consider the same thing in the other fellow.

However, the other fellow can't see why your offense isn't as bad as his.

The Rhyming Optimist
By ALINE MICHAELS

To a Child

LITTLE child, with eyes that smile,
Life has made me wise;
Ah, to barter worldly guile
For such dream-filled eyes!

Years have taught me dreams must fa'l
All too soon to dust;
Give me, child, who owns them all,
Something of your trust!

You are rich in priceless thin s,
Faith and hope you hold,
You are heir to fairies' wings
And the rainbow gold.

Little child with laughter gay,
Only fools would prize
Worldly lore that takes away
Joy from dream-filled eyes!

Tales that are Told

Quite Simple

"I HEAR your son has taken up a profession, Mr. O'Casey," remarked the visitor to the house.

"He has indade," rejoined the host. "He's phwat they call a 'cross-examiner.'"

This was too much for the stranger.

"And phwat's a 'cross-examiner?'" he asked.

For a minute or two O'Casey was at a loss, but eventually he pulled himself together.

"Sure, it's a fellow who asks you questions, an' you answer the questions, an' then he questions the answers," he returned easily.

Quits

MRS. SMITH-VERE had called on her neighbor, Mrs. Brown-Bere, to welcome her back to the neighborhood after a prolonged absence.

"My dear," said Mrs. Smith-Vere, "I am so glad you've come back at last. We have missed you so. The dear vicar was only saying—"

"I'm glad to be back, too," interrupted Mrs. Brown-Bere. "But do tell me all the scandal that's happened while I've been away."

"H'm," said her friend offhandedly, "there hasn't been any since then, dear."—London Answers.

Such Extravagance

THERE had been a newcomer to the club and all the other members were telling each other about him.

"You see that man with the high forehead and the sunken eyes?" asked Akhurst of his friend Crombie.

"Yes," murmured the other. "They tell me he's a new member. What is he?"

"He's an efficiency expert," informed Akhurst.

"What on earth's that?"

Again Akhurst was ready with an answer.

"The sort of man," he replied, "who doesn't enjoy a sea voyage because all the salt is going to waste."

Many Thanks

"DO I understand," said the young man, "that you absolutely decline to let me marry your daughter?"

"I do," replied her father firmly.

"Sir," said the young man, reaching for his hat, "will you shake hands on parting?"

"Of course," said the father, surprised. "And I am glad to see that you take your disappointment so well."

"Yes," said the young man; "and if you'll allow me, I am going to send you a box of cigars, too. You don't know how near that daughter of yours came to having me hooked."

Too Late To Change

THE rain was pouring steadily down and the children at No. 28 were feeling distinctly unhappy. With their faces pressed close to the window-panes they watched the water flowing torrentially down the gutter towards the drain.

"I am afraid we'll have to give up the idea of going to the Zoo, children," remarked their mother. "You see, it's never going to leave off."

"But, mummie," protested little Maurice, who had set his heart on an elephant ride, "we must go! Yes, we must, 'cos I've put it down in my diary that we went!"

New York Day by Day
O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 31.—The museum and flea circus on Forty-second street is in the fourth year of its "run" and threatens to eclipse the record of the Abie show. After 11 o'clock it fills with crowds in evening dress from the theaters all about it. It is a "stunt"—like going to Reuben's for a sandwich.

The museum is no different from its predecessor of other days. Even the amusing twisted mirrors that dwarf or elongate the figure line the entrance halls. There are also lung testers and penny peep shows featuring "The Art of Posing" and "One o'Clock Baby."

The suave tuxedoed announcer with touches of silver at his temples might have stepped from an E. Phillips Oppenheim. The exhibition continues with only an occasional change in the lineup of human freaks. The latest entry is Jean Liberra, the man with two bodies.

There are also the bearded lady, the armless man who autographs his pictures with his toes, the man who defies electricity, the performing seal and the half man and half girl. The admission is trifling, but if you fall for all the rackets it is expensive enough.

The chief attraction, of course, is the flea circus with its tiny performers, under an enlarging glass, rolling balls, climbing ladders, engaging in chariot races and such. They are taken out of wool balls for the show and hop back into them after it is over.

New York has a group of clerks and stenographers organized in protest against the paper napkin. Its members will not patronize eating places using them. The least they could do would be to serve them with stickers. A non-skid paper napkin is needed as much as a good five-cent cigar.

An innovation has come in well trained dancing choruses taking bows. Instead of the entire group rushing to the footlights, just one of the aggregation steps forth to acknowledge the compliment.

They came into a Park avenue cafe and all eyes turned toward them. She was adazzle with diamonds and swathed in ermine. He was resplendently groomed and sported a monocle. After they were seated they began conversing in sign language and it offered a touch of something like drama.

The night clubs continue to abandon the "Hello Sucker!" attitude. One in the Fifties actually displays a sign over its hat check room: "Tipping is not necessary." Stick around. I'm full of surprises.

Wouldn't it surprise you, for instance, any morning now to wake up and read the night clubs are serving a regular-sized sandwich for a dollar and a half?

The revival of two old song favorites, "After the Ball" and "Goodbye My Lady Love," succeeded in stopping a show this season. It may not be long now until many of our sophisticates realize nearly all the really good things came out of the mid-Victorian period they have been hooting. I notice dance masters are preparing for a revival of the old-fashioned waltz, that bicycles are selling better than they have for years, and yesterday morning I saw for sale one of those iron hitching post dinguses of a colored boy holding out an iron ring.

The Enveloping Purpose
By DR. FRANK CRANE

I think it is Mrs. Browning who wrote the lines:

"I sighed to think God's goodness flows around our incompleteness, Round our restlessness His rest."

This is akin to the Scriptural statement that,

"The Lord maketh the world of men to praise Him."

Somehow or other, we do not know how it is, but we know that it is a fact, man is left entirely free to do as he pleases. Yet whatever may be his intentions or the result of his deeds, somehow there is an all-enveloping purpose of God or of destiny which has its own way.

Many men and many movements have endeavored to wreck things and to put over great crimes. The ambitious plans of Tamerlane, Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon for a while seemed to threaten the welfare of the race. Yet in spite of their power and force, in time those movements came to naught, and the progress of the world flowed on.

There has been a slow movement of destiny since the beginning of time that has gradually improved the human race. Many times this improvement seems to have stopped, but in some way everything that impeded it has been swallowed up by time and the world moves on.

There seems to be some gigantic will which overrules the purposes of men and has its own way in the long run.

Gladiatorial games and human slavery have disappeared.

The open traffic in alcohol has received a severe setback in the United States.

There is universal talk of the outlawing of war.

So, slowly but surely, like the advance of an ocean tide, the great will of God sweeps on. The millennium, apparently, will not be a sudden and dramatic event, but will come as the full flower and fruit of forces which we see budding and swelling all along the period of history.

Intelligent optimism is, therefore, no unreasoning attitude of mind, but is based upon the knowledge of history; it is the result of world experience.

We are not to fret ourselves because of evil doers and mischief makers, for they have pitted themselves against the universe.

In time they will go down. In time every connivance that is not in line with the purpose of destiny will come to naught.

The wise man is the man w rests peaceful and serene upon t conviction that in the end the p poses of destiny, which are go will have their way.

OH, THESE WOMEN!
By LEOLA ALLARD.

THE women of this country are given a tremendous advantage over men in the laws of breach of promise. These laws should frighten any man and start many a front page story.

The promise to wed, made by a man already married, entitles a woman to damages if she did not know he was married.

Judge William N. Gemmill, of Chicago, an authority on breach of promise laws, tells this one: A girl sued for damages because her fiance refused to marry her after she was operated upon for goiter. He said she had a scar on her neck and the goiter might return. Anyway, she had become irritable and cross. She claimed his behavior made her that way.

The jury held that only an incurable disease would excuse the man from his obligation and that he had no kick coming if he was the cause of the girl's irritability. She collected $22,000.

Another man refused to marry after he found out at college that second cousins might have defective children. As the law in that state did not forbid the marriage of second cousins, the jury gave the girl $2,000 damages.

Another girl was engaged four years. The wedding date was set many times, but she never got to the altar. The man finally bought a home and asked her to scrub the floors and get it ready for occupancy. She did, and then he rented it to strangers. She asked $20,000, and the jury said it was hers. The man decided the joke was on him, and after the verdict married her. She gave him a receipt for the $20,000. (Wasn't she a feminine Steve Brodie?)

A young man asked a girl to marry him. She answered, "Oh, Jack," and later he married another. The law says that if a girl for any reason remains silent, even if she is struck dumb with surprise, the is no engagement. If she sa "yes," there is. According to Jud Gemmill the jury said "Oh, Jac was equivalent to "yes," and t girl collected $2,500.

According to Judge Gemmill, if girl and man attend a wedding a the man says: "How do you thi we would look standing up th at the altar," and the girl sa "fine," she can sue him and colle He knows of such a case and t girl got $3,000.

It may make a man nervous read these things, but many a wom will better enjoy her breakfast!

One man said to a pretty gir "How long do you suppose it will before we will be getting married?"

She said: "Oh, not long."

He chose a brunette later, and t blonde collected $3,000 on that f low's curiosity.

An Illinois Senator boasts he nev wrote love letters to his wife duri their period of engagement. Anoth attorney knows these laws well a always signed his love letters "wit out prejudice." She was a sm girl that he wooed and got a go lawyer. The fellow paid $2,000, wi all his caution, and for breach promise, if you please.

Another girl collected $500 for b ing jilted and all the man had s was: "How do you think you li our family?" She had answer "fine"—unfortunately for him.

Another girl said the man of h heart deceived her by giving h paste jewels and telling her th were real diamonds. He also t her enchanting stories of courage, all of them untrue. T court held the promise was bas on mutual good faith and gave t girl plenty for the suffering she h endured.

This should completely ruin almo any man's breakfast, but if you don believe me consult a law library.
